

General Miscellany.

The True Betrothal. The Maiden's Question. Yes, you love me now, to-day, Say no change shall us divorce, Answer me once question, pray: Ever 'tis a word superfluous Borrowed from a foreign tongue, It belongs to the eternal And on angels' lips first hung.

The Future of South Carolina. A correspondent of the New York Times (who, from the tone of his letter, is evidently a Republican) writes from Charleston, giving his views rather freely concerning men and politics in the Palmetto State.

Couldn't Help It. In a certain town on the Penobscot river lived two worthy men, neighbors and friends; but they could never agree on political questions. In dispute one day, one of the disputants lost temper and called the other "liar," "fool," "knave," and so on.

Another Little Story. We have published quite a number of little stories pertaining to the public in general, and the craft in particular, yet still have another left, which is as follows: THE TWO MERCHANTS.

A Miller Wanted. A WHITE MAN, competent to take charge of Flour and Grain Mill, with immediate employment by applying to this Office.

An Adroit Swordsman.

Pulaski, as is well known, was as adroit a swordsman as he was perfect in horsemanship, and he ever rode a powerful and fleet charger. During the retreat of American army through New Jersey, in the darkest hour of our national adversity, Pulaski was, with a small party of horsemen, pursued by a large party of British cavalry, the leader of which was a good horseman, and mounted nearly as well as Pulaski.

"If I could only see my mother." "If I could only see my mother!" Again and again was the yearning cry repeated. "If I could only see my mother!"

Beautifully Expressed. The Memphis Avalanche, of late date, thus closes an editorial upon the character, intelligence, courage and patriotism of the soldiers that composed the Southern army:

Extravagance.

It has become so customary to declaim about the extravagance of women, that popular opinion has almost quite forgot that men are spendthrifts too. We admit that it is proper enough to decry diamonds, French laces, Indian shawls, and other luxuries of the sex, when the wearers of these articles exceed their means in buying them.

"If I could only see my mother." "If I could only see my mother!" Again and again was the yearning cry repeated. "If I could only see my mother!"

Haill!

"Shoulder traces." Another negro was holding the plow handles, and still another driving the oxen. The next day it was noticeable that four women had relieved the men, who were doubtless flattered by their labors at the plough.

"If I could only see my mother." "If I could only see my mother!" Again and again was the yearning cry repeated. "If I could only see my mother!"
