As you trivel on through life, You will find it ever so— Nothing like the ready cash, For money makes the mare go. Some will swear that black is white, All for money; Do a wrong and say it's right, All for money.

Moses he will swear to you
His old clothes are good as new;
Don't he make them fit you too,
All for money.

Pretty girls can love old men, All for money; Even wed three score and ten, All for money.
'Tis but a fool whe ever dreams That anything is what it seems; The world is full of mocking scheme All for money.

Many people go to law All for money; Dentists nearly break your jaw, All for money. Tradesmen give you unjust weight, Beggars tease you, early, late, Garroters kindly on you wait,

Lawyers plead the felon's cause, All for money— Yow he has not broke the laws, All for money.
Had he been on t'other side,
What a difference, and how wide
To make him guilty he'd have tried, All for money.

Don't the doctors physic you All for money? Give black draughts and blue pills, All for money. What their patience all endure Any saint won't try, I'm sure— They are good to kill or cure, All for money.

Chalk and-water milkmen sell, All for money, Something else, perhaps, as well, All for money.

Thus I will conclude my strain
With a sentence short and plain—
Everything is done for gain—
All for money.
