The New Church Organ.

BY WILLIAM M. CARLETON.

They've done just as they said they'd do

They're bound the critter shall be seen

They've got a bran new organ, Sue,

For all their fuss and search;

And fetched it into church.

And on the preacher's right

In everybody's sight.

Agin MY voice and vote :

For it was never my desire

To praise the Lord by note.

I've been a sister good an' true

For five and thirty years;

An' prayed my duty clear;

I s'pose I al'avs will:

In good old Ortonville:

I couldn't catch a word;

An' when I seed them grin,

I bid farewell to every fear,

I-couldn't steer it right;

And boldly waded in.

A body ever heard!

It somehow gratifies MY whim.

But when that choir got up to sing.

They sung the most dog-gondest thing

Some worldly chaps was standin' near, thought I'd chase their tune along

But though my voice is good an' strong

When they was high, then I was low,

An' tried with all my might;

An' also contrawise; And I too fast, or they too slow,

To 'mansions in the skies.'

They played a little tune;

didn't understand, an' so

I fetched a lusty tone,

But oh, alas! I found that I Was singing there alone!

I started in too soon.

An' after every verse, you know,

pitched it pretty middlin' high

They laughed a little, I am told,

But I had done my best; And not a wave of trouble rolled

And sister Brown-I could but look-

She understood the time, right through,

Ah! Deacon Tubbs-he all broke down

He looked his hymn book thro' an' thro

As one might well suppose;

He took one look at sister Brown

And laid it on the seat,

He didn't even rise :

And meekly scratched his nose.

And then a pensive sigh he drew,

An' when they took another bout,

But drawed his red bandanner out,

I've done what seemed my part to do, An' prayed my duty clear;

But death will stop my voice, I know,

And some day I to church will go.

And when the folks get up to sing-

And never more come back.

Whene'er that time shall be-

I do not want no patent thing .

A squealin' over me.

An' wiped his weepin' eyes.

I had to laugh, or cough!

The best she could, she said,

An' kep' it, with her head; But when she tried this mornin', of
