In the House the question of fixing s day for adjournment was discussed. In speaking of the necessity of doing the egislative work within a given time, Mr. Hurley said it was the intention of certain parties to do just what they like with the money levied for taxes. If they are not headed off, it will never be used for its legitimate purposes. Mr. J. D. Boston thought that the best thing the House could do, would be to adjourn. After all the time passed since the beginning of and do something in regard to the public debt, and then go home. Mr. Bowley wanted more time. So far, the House had only worked on suppositions.
