From the New York Clipper.

WHAT TO TELL HER.

"Go, little bird, and tell her
My love, my Adaline,
That I long and pray for our bridal-day,
When she'll be truly mine.

"Tell her my dreams are all of her,
And I shall happy be,
Only, alas! when the long days pass,
And her dear face I see.

"Tell her, O little bird, I pray,
That to my love you tell
So prettily, as if from me
What you can say so well.

"But, Oh, I charge you, on your life
Breathe not a single word
To her of what in yon cool grot
The other night you heard.

"When underneath the linden-tree
(Above, I knew you were,)
I told Annette—when there we met—
I loved no one but her.

"I know such things are very wrong,
But I, what could I do?
Whoe'er in youth saw love and truth?
I'll leave it now to you.

"So go, my bird, and tell her
(Now mind what you are at)
I love her, Oh, so much, you know,
But not a word of that."

From the New York Mercury.

Fatal Vanity.

An extraordinary story of gross superstition and ignorant credulity has been communicated to the Mercury's London correspondent from Lofthouse, a small town in Cleveland, Yorkshire, England. Since she attained womanhood, three years since, Miss Sallie Booth has been reckoned the belle of the small town, and has been much courted and flattered by young men of her rank in life. She was the daughter of a poor farmer, and had received a very primitive education. She had gipsy-looking black eyes, aquiline nose, brilliant white teeth, and small hands; but there were two moles on her upper lip, from which coarse, black hairs constantly sprung. Many of her admirers affected to see no end of beauty in these moles, but spiteful girls spoke of Sallie Booth's moustache, and the irritated beauty tried all sorts of quack depilatories to eradicate what she thought facial blemishes. Meanwhile Miss Booth captured

AN ARISTOCRATIC LOVER.

He was the son of Captain Wharton, of Shelton Castle, and had acquired an unenviable reputation at Harrow public school for irregularities of a dissolute type. Farmer Booth held his farm under Captain Wharton, and the licentious young man therefore had easy access to the girl. While the girls of the place grew green with envy when they saw Sallie Booth walking forth with the "gentleman lover," older people predicted that no good would come out of it. Captain Wharton unavailingly remonstrated with his son, and then warned Farmer Booth of the unscrupulous character of his son's advances to Sallie. But the father was as proud of the connection as his daughter, and openly boasted of his future son-in-law in the alehouses of the place. Before long the intimacy between the pair exceeded proper limits, and Sallie importuned Harry to marry her. The request did not educe the expected enthusiasm; yet he languidly said that he had no objection to marry her if were removed from her lip. In the spring, in the hey-day of their acquaintance, he had pronounced them pretty; now their removal was a sine qua non to matrimony.

"THOSE HORRID MOLES"

Five-and-twenty miles from Lofthouse, at a small village called Seamer, there resided an old woman reputed to possess supernatural powers—always exercised, however, for benefi cent ends. To old Nanny Hunter Miss Booth proceeded and submitted her case. After retiring for "prayer and meditation," the sibyl informed her that there was but one way to obliterate the moles, and that was by touching them with at midnight in a dark room—the hand to be held in contact with the lips until it grew warm! It was a crucial operation, yet, revolting as it was, Sallie resolved to "go through it" the first opportunity.

It was some weeks before a dead man turned up to be experimented on by Miss Booth. But on the last night of June the body of a seaman was washed ashore off the alum works and the corpse was conveyed to the stable of a neighboring public house and locked up until the inquest. Sallie at once proceeded to the inn, and acquainted the old ostler with the story of her moles and the Seamer wise woman's prescriptions, offering him half a sovereign to aid and abet her in applying the swollen, flabby hands of the unknown corpse to her face when midnight came. "She was a said Bob Suggett, the ostler, in telling the story afterwards; "she went right into the deep darkness of the stable, and I heard her rustling along the straw as she groped for the dead man's hand, while I stood, feeling queer-like, outside the door. It might have been five, or it might have been ten minutes, when she gav such a screech as might ha' wakened the dead. Then she yell, yell, yelled like a locomotive whistle, and I tuk to my heels and ran."

Landlord Coulson and his patrons listened with awe and amazement to the ostler's story, and proceeded to the stable with a lantern. The corpse sat bolt upright, white and jelly-like as a new-scalded pig, and Sallie Booth held on to its shoulders, giggling and grinning and laughing. The spectators were

PIERCED WITH HORROR?

But as they stood motionless and silent, and saw the girl embrace the clammy corpse and cry: "Kiss me, Harry, darling, the moles are gone," they became satisfied that they saw before them a gigantic misfortune that had merged into madness. When the landlord approached to take her away she dropped down with a piercing shriek, and swooned away. She was carried home by four men on the stable door, and almost as soon as she reached her father's house the pangs of premature labor supervened. The waif was never conscious of existence, and the poor mother was removed during the latter part of August last to York Asylum hopelessly insane. Yet nothing has been done toward punishing the Seamer sibyl, or the ignorant accomplice, Bob Suggett.

—Alfred A. Clisby, Esq., Edgefield's most energetic, enterprising and spirited merchant was united—on Thursday evening of last week—in the bonds of matrimony to Miss Fannie Glover of that place. The young lady, is the oldest daughter of Arthur S. Glover, Esq., and confessedly one of the most beautiful and accomplished ladies of that section. The ceremony was performed in Columbia, where we had the personal gratification of wishing the deservedly happy couple God speed on their wedding tour to the North.—Aiken Tribune.

Premium Cotton.

Having heard accounts of Mr. Jas. M. Crawford's extraordinary cotton, we went up to his place in the upper part of the city Monday afternoon to see for ourselves. We found a measured acre loaded down with fruit, the limbs flattened and some broken with the weight. There are 50 rows, 70 hills the row, and 2 stalks to the hill. That will give 7,000 stalks. It has been computed that the stalks will average 75 bolls each. If this estimate holds good, Mr. Crawford will have 525,000 bolls. Of course, the number of bolls is yet undetermined. A close approximation to the number could be made by counting the plants in a few rows of each quality of the cotton, and estimating accordingly. The cotton is as remarkable for the size of the bolls as for their number. As an instance of number, we counted 35 heavy bolls on a section of 15 inches of stalk, the whole height of stalk being 4 feet. As an evidence of weight, we witnessed the picking out of 76 bolls by Mr. Crawford, and weighed the cotton from them ourselves. The weight was 1 pound 4 ounces. Some allowance ought to be made for slight dampness remaining from rain of the morning or day before, but there can be no doubt, we think, that 75 good bolls of this cotton will weigh one pound throughout the picking season. It takes 120 bolls of ordinary cotton to make a pound.

The seed planted by Mr. Crawford is of the "Cheatham Champion" variety, grown and improved by Mr. J. T. Cheatham, of Bethany, Central Railroad, Georgia. He is very much interested in the crop. He has offered a premium of $500 for the best acre of cotton grown from his seed. There are, doubtless, other good crops to compete for it, but Mr. Crawford, so far as heard from, is a long ways ahead of them all. He had already gathered, on Monday evening, over 2,100 pounds.

We shall keep our readers informed upon the results of this remarkable crop as they are further developed. It teaches an instructive lesson, and furnishes a most encouraging example.

CLOVER AND GRASS.—We advise all who contemplate sowing clover and grass to do so this month, and, if practicable, to sow them by themselves, and not with small grain. Grass will require rich land, well cleansed and thoroughly pulverized. Clover may be started on comparatively poor land, by sowing 300 lbs. of acid phosphate and 15 lbs. clover seed to the acre. Rolling the seed in plaster and top dressing, as soon as the seed is sown, with stable manure, will also insure a "catch." We should be glad to see all the incredulous try a small experiment according to above instructions. Clover and orchard and tall meadow oat grass may be sown together—10 lbs. clover seed, and one bushel each of the others. Clover and grass seeds must be covered very lightly—it will not do to plough them in, unless double or treble the usual quantities of seed be sown.—Southern Cultivator, for September.

—I wish that every cotton planter in South Carolina had been in the buggy with your correspondent and Mr. J. M. Crawford, of this place, this morning; then would they too have seen the finest acre of cotton the world has ever produced. I speak advisedly and guardedly for fear of exaggerating. To particularize: There are seven thousand plants within the acre lot, from which lot Mr. Crawford will certainly obtain three bales of cotton—an average of half a pound to the stalk. This is a moderate calculation as he confidently expected to get six bales from the one acre until the late drought injured the crop. The variety is known as the "Cheatham Bunch"—came from Georgia, and the seed cost Mr. C. $200 per bushel. I counted ninety-two bolls as large as guinea eggs upon one stalk, and the field will average seventy-five bolls to the stalk. A section of stalk eighteen inches in length, now upon exhibition at Dr. E. E. Jackson's drug store, has twenty-two bolls upon it and weighs twenty-five ounces. There is a prize of $500 offered by the agent for the sale of the seed for the best yield to the acre, and Mr. Crawford will certainly get it, as his crop cannot possibly be excelled.—Columbia Correspondence of Charleston News & Courier.

In the city of Columbia, S. C., where, under the government of carpet-baggers and their allies, the people have been plundered beyond endurance, a movement for reform has been commenced, the most encouraging feature of which is that it was set on foot by colored citizens heretofore completely under the influence of the white rascals who have made public robbery their regular occupation. We learn from the Charleston Express that it was the colored men in Columbia who first came forward and offered to co-operate with the whites in a united effort for good government. In many parts of the South where the negro element predominates, the most intelligent of the colored men, disgusted with the villainies which have been perpetrated by the carpet-baggers and their confederates, have joined hands with the Conservatives, in the hope of thereby ending the rule of thievery which has so long prevailed there. In this significant fact we see one of the most encouraging signs of the times.—N. Y. Sun.
