Edgefield Advertiser :- I returned home on the second inst, after an extensive or p North and East. Among the many places of interest, I visited, the one havplaces of interest, I visited, the one having the greatest attractions for me was Engegield Village. Engelield! the land of any isirth, and that of my father and maker. I had been absent from the classicoid Village for twenty-eight years. Judge then of my glowing, heart-felt smotion when the familiar charch spires appeared to my searching eyes on the tharming of the twenty-lith of July. "God biess the dear old spot!" spontaneously came from my hips; and my eyes filled with tears as my feet pressed eyes filled with tears as my feet pressed once more the walks of my childhood. Only two I found whom I had even known before! And we two feit that time had beckward turned and we were again to be a fool if we attempt to refute all the wild tales that will naturally be circulated to all was: "They are dead." Among the armone was one in whom I always recognized, of all men, one of the most galfant, chivalous and true friends. I speak of Thos. (i. Bacon. I gel dearly hoped to see him, but he too was zone. The children born in Edgefield are scattered from the Savannah River to the Pacific Cooss. They are as Miss Ida & Jams, of Augusta, but whose efore! And we two felt that time had true to the instincts and love of country as those who still are there. " Edgofield forever, if right; but right or wrong, Edgefield forever!" The love of their helivity is deep seated in their souls. Absence severs no links. None are ever found to be ay her; but to know they are born in Edgeneld, or live in South Carolina, is among her absent chil-dren an affinity that guarentee friendship and a hospitable roof. C. G. Thursdan.

"The Mississippi plan" was for ev ary County to take gare of itself. Now, let the Democracy of overy County take gare of itself in its own paragiar way, and there'll be no trouble either in Fovember next or in November 1850.

In another column we publish the Chronicle and Constitutionalist's excellent account of the Hussar pic-nic at Lanham's Spring on Friday last. Hundreds and hundreds of fair women and horses. brage men went to it, and all returned to their homes with lively descriptions of a happy day. The tilt was chivalrous; the grove was charming; the space and shade were splendid; the dancing platform was the finest ever built in Edgefield; the music was filled with the soul of the dance; the table was spread with meats and truits and hashes and sauces and cakes, good, even rivaling the an cient feasts of the gods; and Capt. Markert and his handsome troopers were knights of the olden time not only in their prowess but in their hospitality.

Benjamin Booth is not dead.

And as for the Richmond Hussars they have everything to be proud of, and a noble record to hand down to posterity They did not win the prize in the tilt but how could they, laboring as they did under every-disadvantage? They had graveled from Augusta that morning, starting at midnight, and adding labor and vexation to their laborious march by losing their way among the sandcountry roads; indeed it is much to be admired that they could ride at all-let sione as splendidly as they did. Edgefield has learned to love them well, and us over and over again in the future.

The rains are now coming thick, fast and generally. The crops in some sec Hous, however, are beyond recovery. O ir beloved friend, Mr. A. Stallworth, or Phoenix, who spent Monday night with us, tells us that he has had no rain for 14 weeks, and that this drought pervades Stragrow strip running from Phoenix gound to Dark Corner. The Ninety-Six region has also suffered terribly. Gen. Gary and Mrs. Geo. D Tillman danced together as merrily at the Hus sar pic-nic as if they had been twentyone and sixteen. We warned them be fore they began, that if they exhibited the slightest rustiness or heaviness, we should publish them in the Advertiser as old people. But the lady, who has the lithe figure and elastic tread of only and the G. & C. R. R., for the reduce twenty years, kept "Old Mart" so well

THE AFFRAY OF MONDAY LAST. We shall say but little about it, inasdollar per square for each subsequent in-much as our people already know it in all its details. The Toneys and the Booths are two families who have lived since our earliest recollection in the country immediately East of Pine House. The Toneys are people of means; the Booths are poor. In 1869, in Ku Klux times, Advertisements will be inserted at the Ben Booth shot and killed young Luther rate of $1.50 per square (ten minionlines, Toney. For this he was tried, convicted or less) for the first insertion, and one of manslaughter, and served two or three years in the penitentiary. Since then a vengeful feud has existed between the two families, and ever and anon the Booths have sought a difficulty with the Toneys. They came to Edgefield on Monday morning-five of them-with the openly avowed design of killing Brooker Toney. And the result is that Brooker Toney, James Booth and Tom Booth are lying in bloody graves, while Ben Booth and Mark Toney are lying low of their wounds. In this there is no political sangor, nor sudden bloodthirstness inflamed by liquor. None of these men were drunk. We deplore the matter with feelings of absolute anguish; but we have not the slightest idea of villifying or stigmatising either the Booths or the Toneys-God be their judge. We never knew the Booths personally; but we have k town Mark and Brooker Toney from their childhood, and we always recognixed them gladly as friends and as gentlescen. We know that we shall be tor ribly criticased and abused for saying this-and for not carries Loth Booths and Toneys bloody devils and incaracte demons-and that we shall be stigmatised as an encourager of blood and a justifier of murder. But we care not. We shall not slage these dead men.
