Testing Coal.

An apparatus by which an engineer may test or determine the quality and adaption of the coal he receives is described in the Boston Journal of Commerce. A SOLDIER OF TRUTH. A VETERAN'S VALUABLE ADDITION

TO WAR LITERATURE. How an Odd Signal Agreed Upon by Was Finally Used-A Mystery the Old Soldier Didn't Try to Explain.

As the reporter was rapidly hurrying past the door of a saloon he was met by an old soldier, who suggestively tipped his hat. "If you will tell me a story," re marked the reporter, accepting the tip, "I'll pay for the potations. I have a thirst for a story; you have a thirst for a drink. Let us exchange."

The veteran was quick to respond, as rain, and, opening the door, he bowed the reporter in and escorted him to a table in a quiet corner, where presently the potables were served.

"I don't think I could have earned what I am now so greatly and gratefully enjoying," said the veteran, with a glowing cheek, as he set down his glass, after a long swallow, "had it not been that today I met an old comrade from Kentucky, a state, you will remember, which had soldiers in both armies, and good soldiers, I may add. This man, who is now a merchant and comes to New York to buy goods every year, was in the Federal army, and he had a nephew in the same regiment with himself and another in the Confederate army. The young chaps were brothers, and they were mighty fond of each other, but they were fonder of their principles or patriotism or politics, or whatever you may call it, so they agreed to disagree, and each one go to the side he thought was the right side.

"It was a sad parting, for they had been closer together than most brothers, and before they separated they fixed up in Roses. a kind of signal to identify themselves by, so that 'f one was wounded and left on the field he could notify the other if it happened they were on the opposite sides in that particular fight It was a boyish kind of a lottery chance of one in a million, but it suited them, and that's all they cared for The signal arrangement was to be a light chair with a note fastened to it, and the whole thing was to be fastened to the bullet and dropped into the old muskets they had in those days. This was to be # ed at random up into the air to fall among the soldiers of the opposite side to be picked up as it might and taken to the man whose address was in the note, along with other instructions to be followed out by the brother who might be in condition to do it. There were a lot of wounded men, and dead ones, too, for that matter, scattered through the woods, where most of the fighting had been. What the details of the romance, or the tragedy, or whatever you want to call it, are I don't know. I know, though, that during the night we had re-enforcements, and when we began to cautiously peep around, as soon as the day began to break, we discovered that the enemy had by some hook or crook taken alarm and departed in the night, leaving their dead on the field, and among them, when we sent out our burying party, we lound one of those boys with a bullet through his lung and another, bearing a chain and a note, buried in his brain. On our side we found the other nephew with both legs broken by a ball and a bullet through his heart, with a chain and
