Edgefield Advertiser

THOS. J. ADAMS, - - - - - EDITOR

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 7, 1897.

The phosphate commission have recently visited the works and dredges, and have reduced the royalty to 25 cents per ton on river rock.

A cyclone at Guthrie, Oklahoma, last week destroyed three-fourths of the town. More than a dozen persons were killed and 150 badly injured.

The home of the blizzard, the great Northwest, is now being swept by terrific cyclones that demolish homes and destroy many human lives.

Tennessee's exposition will open at Nashville on May 1st. The buildings are said to be marvels of beauty and the exhibits interesting and wonderful.

Another newspaper correspondent has been killed in Cuba. C. E. Crosby, of New York, was shot a few days ago while watching a battle between the Spaniards and Cubans.

Thousands have been made homeless by the floods on the Mississippi river. The condition of the people of that section is pitiable, and an appropriation from Congress as well as private contributions have been asked for.

State Treasurer Timmerman says. in reference to the expected deficit in the State's finances, that there will be money enough to run the government until September, when it will be necessary to borrow $100,000. He thinks the income tax will add little to the treasury.

Gen. Grant's mausoleum will be dedicated with imposing ceremonies in New York on April 27th. Many who fought against him have signified their intention to pay a tribute to his memory by their presence on the occasion. Mosby, the gallant Confederate, will figure in the parade.

The trustees of Clemson College have decided to continue the work of holding farmers' institutes. These institutes will be held without cost to the community, and ... ulty, who are experts in agriculture, chemistry, horticulture, dairying, and veterinary science, will preside at the sessions. Parties wishing the advantage of an institute for the farmers of their district should address, at an early date, President E. B. Craighead, Clemson College, S. C. Edgefield should have a farmers' institute this summer when the crops are laid by. Application ought to be made at once.

WONDERFUL THINGS THAT ARE NEAR.

The Philadelphia Press foreshadows the coming of the millenium as follows:

"Flying is solved. The principle is known. A mechanical expedient is all that is needed now to make it successful. Practical flight is to-day not more than five or ten years off.

A glow worm makes light with about one three hundredth part of the force used in ordinary artificial light. When men know how to make light as cheap, streets and homes will be as light as day for a mere fraction of what light costs now. This is near. Vacuum illumination without incandescence is already in full operation, and in a year or two should cut down the price of light to a sixth of its current cost, and in five or ten years light may be like water, turned on in every house at will.

When these come, the only use for gas will be for cooking—if this is not done by electricity. Factories, also, before many years, will be run by transmitted electric power. This has begun to be done, and in five or ten years will be completed, and the factory fire and boiler will be a thing of the past. The city of the future, and no very distant future, will have no trolley poles or wires and no horses. All movements will be on rail by silent air motors or by horseless carriages equally silent. All pavements will be asphalt. Unlimited light will be as cheap as unlimitod water is to-day. No coal will be delivered at private house, and ashes, street dust and dirt will be reduced to a minimum. With no factory fire and no kitchen and furnace fires, the air will be as pure in the city as in the country. Trees will have a chance: houses be warmed and lighted as easily and cheaply as they are now supplied with water."

Now is the time to subscribe for the ADVERTISER.

THE PROPER POSITION.

There has been some doubt in the minds of Solicitor Tnurmond's friends as to whether he would discharge the duties of his office pending his trial for the killing of Mr. Harris, but he has very properly we think, concluded not to appear as prosecuting officer for the State until after his own case has been heard and determined. After consulting the Governor, Attorney General, and others he has given out the following statement:

"Being a prosecuting office the discharge of the duties of the officer might become embarrassing to me pending the decision of my countrymen on the charge to be preferred on account of the recent deplorable occurrence at Edgefield. I deemed it my duty to advise with the governor and attorney general as to the course to pursue relative to my duties as solicitor. There is no impediment in the law to the performance of said duties by me, but a sense of propriety dictates that I ask the presiding judge at each term of court to appoint a soliciter pro tem. to be compensated by me out of my salary. After consultation with the governor and attorney general they agree fully with me.

"While I regret sorely said unfortunate occurrence I feel perfectly justified before God and man in what I did, and do not believe that I will be blamed in the least when the facts are known.

"I will see that the interests of the State do not suffer, but I will not conduct prosecution until my case is determined."

WAR REMINISCENCES.

Two Confederate Generals, Forrest and Morgan.

BY "KNAPSACK.

Forrest and Morgan were both cavalry generals, and both were "raiders"—in fact both had many things in common. Both practiced that unique innovation in warfare—originated by Forrest himself—which was to rush with the cavalry upon some weaker body of the enemy, hastily dismount and fight as infantry, whip the enemy, parole the prisoners, and then mount and ride away to other victories before recruits could arrive to reinforce the surprised Federals. As raiders they respect the enemy continually and terribly, so that both names became proverbial and a terror, not only to large bodies of cavalry and infantry, but also to the "homeguards" and bushwhackers." However, there was great dissimilarity and a man of determination and sternness, with some consequential roughness. His great passion was to whip the enemy, and what was not relevant to that—what did not make directly for that—he held in light esteem. He accepted courage in his soldiery as a matter of course scorned the faint of heart, and summarily had all deserters shot—sometimes, it was said, "without judge or jury"—in other words, without court-martial.

As to his personal appearance, he was something over six feet tall, but of medium weight; rather sinewy, with a desperate looking mien, and withal careless as to his attire—that is, what refined society would call uncouth. Nevertheless, he was as brave as a lion. One day some ladies of Mississippi who had been sewing garments for the boys in gray, feeling a deep admiration for this brave man, presented him with a pair of silver spurs made of their own thimbles. A little patriotic speech was made along with the gift. For a moment the stern General was overcome. His hands trembled, and a tear rolled down his cheek as he said, with fervor; "I'll wear 'em, and if the enemy gets 'em it will be when my heels are cold on the ground."

Gen. Morgan, known the nation over as "Morgan the Raider," was, until the beginning of the war, a gentleman of the blue grass region of Kentucky. He was the owner of fine race horses—thoroughbred. His residence was at Lexington, to this day the great center of culture, education and aristocracy in that State.

As a commander he was kind and good to those who served under him, as constituting his ramous "Moreover he led them in such true soldierly style, that the members of his command still still living are ever ready to extol his prowess his kind benevolence. He was a man of fine physique—of more than the average height, and stately. His soldiers admired him much for his grace in the saddle. He had deep blue eyes, that bespoke great sympathy for his fellow-patriots. There was this impressive thing about John H. Morgan: he was a soldier with grace and chivalry as well as valor.

Gen. Morgan had many thrilling experiences. Among these was his raid in Ohio (a venture which he beforehand had deprecated) and capture. imprisonment at Columbus, and his remarkable escape by the assistance of his fellow-captive, Capt. Thos Hines, whom Morgan nicknamed Count of Monte Cristo," because of his ingenuity in the exploit. Hines was a brickmason, and by his skill effected an outlet under the wall through which he Morgan and several other Confederates escaped. They immediately took a train—and, singularly enough, Morgan was seated beside a Federal Major. The latter remarked, as they passed the military prison; "There is where the great Morgan is imprisoned." The General added: "Yes. and I trust they 'keep him as safe as he is now." To which the Major assenting said "Yes" right heartily. After many narrow escapes, they (Morgan[and Hines) made their way safely out of the enemy's territory.

But Forrest was never captured.

Another striking contrast we find in the manner of their deaths. Forrest passed quietly away, with his family around him, several years after the war being at the time a member of Court Street C P. Church, in Memphis. Morgan was killed at Greenville, East Tennessee, in a manner most deplorable. He, with his staff, had taken up quarters at the house of a Northern sympathizer. A young woman, the daughter of he man in whose house they were quartered went hurriedly on foot to where the Federals were stationed and told them that Morgan was at her father's house.Immediately the Yankees hurried to Greenville. Morgan's command was stationed out of town; so when the enemy came up he had no one with him but his staff. As the Federals surrounded the house several entered the room in which Morgan sat. Seeing there was no chance of escape, he threw up his hands in surrender. But in a moment, a Federal soldier, flagrantly disregarding the usages of civilized warfare, took deliberate aim and fired, killing Morgan instantly. The Yankee's act is explained by the fact that a liberal reward had been offered to the one who should kill the famous raider. Thus ended the career of this brilliant cavalryman.

She Would be Consul.

Mrs Chaplin Weed of Muscatine, Ia, the first woman to apply for the position of United States consul. This progressive woman is desirous to represent Uncle Sam as his consul in Germany, and she has as good backing as any man who was ever sent abroad by the government at Washington.

Senator Allison is representing her and her petiton to President McKinley. The document is signed by all the big Republican politicians of Iowa, including Governor Drake, the judges of the supreme court and several congressmen. It is also signed by Horace Boies and George M. Pullman.

Mrs. Weed and her friends contend that she is amply qualified to fill the position she seeks. She has a splendid education, and in addition to her broad culture, she is a practical business woman having an intimate acquaintance with commercial matters. She is the widow of Chester Weed, who was a prominent mercantile man in Iowa, and who built up a large business, which Mrs Weed has successfully managed since her husband's death.

Mrs Weed has traveled extensively fluentlyand is one of the social leaders of Muscatine. So highly did Governor Boies think of her capacity that he tendered her the position of trustee in one of the Iowa colleges, which, however, she declined.

Mrs Weed lives in a beautiful house on one of the highest points of the bluff overlooking the Mississippi river, which she built recently. She is independently rich and very popular.

Farmers' Institutes.

Clemson College, March 31.–The trustees of Clemson college at their recent meeting decided to continue the work of holding farmers' institutes. Arrangements have been made to hold institutes at the following places: At Greer's in April; at Fairview, Greenville county, May 1; in Chester county, April 15-16; in Newberry, 14. These institutes will be held without cost to the community. Members of the college faculty, who are experts in the veterinary science will be present.

Every county in the State has the right to at least one institute. In order that arrangements may be made to cover as much ground as possible with the least expense to the college. parties wishing institutes held in their community should address at an early date President E. B. Craighead, at Clemson.

Washington, March 27.—The sensation of the tariff debate today was the onslaught made by Richard son of Tennessee, upon the bill. He read from comparative statements prepared by the chairman of the committee and stated that the present bill will tax the people a great deal higher than even the McKinley bill. Twelve out of fourteen new schedules, he declared, contain rates higher than the McKinley bill.

It is unfortunate that the consumers of the United States have no agent to represent them in the prepartion of the new tariff The bili as it passed the House is a New England measure, with a sop thrown to the farmers in the shape of increased duties upon eggs hay, potatoes and other agricultural products, but what is the good of an adpitional duty of 1 cent a dozen upon eggs or another dollar a ton on hay, or a duty of 10 cents a bushel on potatoes, when, under the new woo en schedule the farmer will have to pay $5 more for evory suit of clothes?

Train of 20 cars loaded with cotton goods made at the Piedmont and Pelzer mills went up by Greenville last Thursday on its way to Shanghai, China. Twelve of the cars were loaded at Piedmont and eight at Pelzer. There were 2,500 bales of goods in all, worth $40 a bale makingjust a cool $100,000.
