Tax paying time was out on Monday of this week. Of course there can be no more days of grace. If you have not paid yet you are in the soup beyond any question; and if there be any in Edgefield county who have paid the taxes and penalty, such persons are entitled to have the penalty portion refunded.

The legislature at its session just ended, exempted the counties of Oconee, York, and Pickens from the operation of the dispensary law, that is to say, gave those counties prohibition and for the good and sufficient reason that they wanted prohibition and wanted it bad, so bad that in one town at least of these counties you could not rent a building for love or money in which to sell liquor.

Work the Roads. Supervisor H. Q. Talbert requests us to say that overseers of roads will see that the roads are put in good order as soon as possible. Three days work must be put on the roads by the first of April, 1898.

Trapp, Luther, and Chris. The last legislature repealed the law requiring three supervisors of registration for each county and reduced the number to one. At the session just ended the number was increased to three again, thus virtually re-enacting the old law. Under this new law Chris Williams, Trapp McManus, and Luther Brunson have been or are to be appointed supervisors of registration for Edgefield at a salary of one hundred dollars each per annum.

CORRESPONDENCE.

DR. THOS. J. MCKIE.

EDITOR ADVERTISER. How rapidly the Confederate veterans are passing away. Within a brief six months McGowan, Hagood, Bratton (general officers from South Carolina) Deepportes, and now McKie of the staff, with many of the rank and file, have fallen victims to that common enemy, death. With the flight of time this list will be increased in rapid succession.

Nobody realizes this more sensibly than the grim soldiers of the South. They meet it with the same composure that sustained them in the shock of so many battles and supported them so bravely through the perils and poverty and trials which followed defeat. The last great sorrow to throw its shadow over the State, especially Edgefield, is the death of Dr. T. J. McKie, as noble a Roman as his country ever produced.

Long and trying years of intimate acquaintanceship enables me to speak advisedly of Dr. McKie's character. He was one of the purest men, knightliest gentlemen I have ever known, and I mean this in its most comprehensive sense. He did not pose as a gentleman on occasions. In his daily life, in his relations with the highest and humblest, in every walk of life, professional, business, social, he never forgot that deference due to others. He was always a modest, respectful, self-respecting gentleman.

Endowed with a liberal education and high professional attainments, he cultivated the highest and best ideals in literature, in art, in nature, and sought only the elevated and ennobling pursuits of life.

His services in the Confederate army were distinguished and without a blemish. His patriotic love of country, his anxiety for her welfare and honor knew no bounds save opportunity to promote them.

During the troublous times in our neighborhood, in Meriwether township, in 1874, when the negroes, under the vicious leadership of bad men, were betrayed into taking the law into their own hands, I had frequent opportunity to test his courage, self-sacrifice, and judgment, and can say with absolute sincerity, no man ever met and overcame grave responsibilities and dangers with more fortitude and fearlessness.

Amid the most provoking temptations to gratify resentments and wreak vengeance upon a people who attempted to assassinate him, in return for an almost paternal kindness and care he had always shown them, he never permitted his temper to get the better of his self-possession, or allowed himself to cross the path of moderation and forbearance.

It almost makes one shudder to recall, even at this late day, looking back through the mists of a quarter of a century, the terrible ordeal and trials through which we passed in Meriwether in '74. With the alien and scalawag in control of every office in the State, stultifying and urging the ignorant and misguided negroes to acts of lawlessness and spoliation, with the spirit of our people broken, and disheartened by the heel of oppression and wrong, with our families and property at the mercy of hirelings and shameless profligate adventurers, our condition seemed almost hopeless and desperate. Under these conditions the people of Meriwether struck the first blow, lighted the first torch for disenfranchisement and relief, and taught their fellow citizens in other sections of the State what courage and self-reliance exercised with prudence and firmness could accomplish. It was the heavy skirmish line which led up to and made possible the great battle for white supremacy and liberty of 1876. The splendid courage of such men as Dr. Tom McKie, Joe Meriwether, Dr. Hugh Shaw, Joe Thurmond, John Mealing, Levi Reese, A. P. Butler, Hugh Scott, and the host of other high spirited, self-sacrificing men carried us through the fiery perils of that eventful period.

Through it all Dr. McKie was the same quiet gentleman, tireless, vigilant patriot. He, with others, took his life in his hands and spared no effort to relieve his neighborhood of the reign of terror, precipitated by the enemies of his State. Once, while in the discharge of his professional duties, he was fired upon from ambush in the night time, and almost miraculously escaped death. His clothing was riddled with bullets, his horse wounded, from rifles in the hands of negroes at close quarters. He came immediately upon the scene of this cowardly attempt at assassination, after midnight, to my house to inform us of what had happened. I say "my house." He was received in the yard near the smouldering embers of my house, for the torch of the incendiary had destroyed the house and everything in it, except my family, who barely escaped with their lives.

Amid this ghastly scene of ruin and destruction, fresh from the midnight attempt on his life, he uttered no word of resentment, nor did he counsel reprisals or retaliation. We repaired to the residence of Mr. Archy Morgan, than whom there was no truer or nobler gentleman to be found anywhere, and there gathered a posse of determined friends and neighbors, who patiently, but firmly maneuvered the insurrectionary negroes out of the neighborhood with loss of but a single life. There was never such an instance of self control and forbearance on the part of the white people. Their provocation to retaliation and punishment was intense, but they held their hands, realizing that the negro was not so much to blame as their cowardly, white allies, who fled for safety as soon as the danger signal was raised. I wish to repeat and emphasize that in all this excitement, turmoil and uncertainty, Dr. McKie never once lost his head, self-possession or magnanimity of spirit. He visited the sick of the very people who had sought his life and relieved their sufferings with as much quiet fidelity as if they had been his protectors and guardians. And he continued his ministrations often without compensation up to within a few weeks of his death.

Sound the hearts of those people today, the negroes of that neighborhood, and you will touch a chord of sorrow and sympathy, which attests their love and respect for their dead friend. Well may they lament his death, for in the performance of his professional duty he made no distinction of race or color, but treated all with the same conscientious consideration.

Death is a debt we all have to pay, but we can ill afford to spare such characters as Dr. McKie; unfortunately for us, they are becoming more rare as we get further away from the days that bred them. He was not only an accomplished physician, but a high toned gentleman, and we shall miss him after a long, honorable, useful career, as few men are missed.

His delicate sensibilities, modest, retiring disposition made the active participation in the turmoil of politics distasteful to him, but he always felt the keenest interest in the political welfare of the country and the honor and character of State and county government. He entertained the supreme contempt for the demagogue and chafed under the exacting and false pretensions of small men.

No man ever established and lived up to a higher standard of life, or left a more valuable heritage of honor and upright living to those who come after him.

Johnson's Chill and Fever Tonic

Cures Fever In One Day. Saluda Items. A negro charged with house breaking escaped from the Saluda jail to-day.

Wise Brothers have taken the cake selling mules here this year. "Uncle George" is the head of the firm, and when you want a mule or horse always be sure that he will "treat you white."

The Wheeler Hotel is rearing its lofty head skyward. It will no doubt be ready by the May term of court to entertain Col. Jim Tillman when he comes over.

The Methodists are making arrangements to build a neat and attractive church building—in fact work has already begun.

We are whooping for some man to beat Ellerbe, the "dramatic" failure of South Carolina politics.

Saluda, S. C., Feb. 17. JOHNSON'S CHILL AND FEVER TONIC Cures Fever In One Day. "Uncle George" Announces.

To the Democracy of South Carolina: Much more at the suggestion of others than by my own prompting I announce my candidacy for governor, honestly believing that the office seeks the man, or else I would not have received so many letters urging me to run.

Manly candor also bids me to confess that a sense of duty as a citizen impels me to make the effort to reunite the people of the state and correct certain evils, which if done would result in more liberty and less taxation. To achieve these ends I shall advocate several measures that if adopted would both strengthen local self-government and reduce present annual state and county taxes at least a fourth—or say, half a million dollars—without diminishing but positively increasing the efficiency of our government. What these measures are and argument in support of them, will be discussed later on. I shall run as the candidate of no faction, no ring, no boss, but simply on my own character a man and record as a public servant.

Geo. D. TILLMAN.

New Process for Baling Cotton.

Through the inventive genius of one George A. Lowry, a machine has been invented that seems destined to revolutionize the cotton business. The machine is a simple piece of mechanism that puts cotton in round bales and while it is yet new and untried except the experiment made by the company, it is looked on favorably by the cotton men who have seen it. General Stephen M. Wells, president of the Planters' Company, of Boston, was in the city yesterday with a bale of the cotton baled by the machine and photographs of the machine.

The machine, as pictured here, is attached to the gin and as the cotton is ginned it can be put right into the machine and baled before leaving the ginhouse. The cost of machine is something under $500 and it may be run by the same power that runs the gin. The bales made by this process are round, and in size they are eighteen inches in diameter and forty-two inches high, each bale weighing 250 pounds. The cotton is packed in spiral layers, while its density is forty-four pounds to the cubic foot, as against a density of twenty-two pounds to the cubic foot in the bales put up by the ordinary process. It is not packed too tightly to be used as soon as the bale is opened.

In the other round bales the trouble has been that the bales have been put around a solid rod and while the cotton was loose on the outside of the bale, on the inside it is packed so tight that it is perfectly hard. This machine leaves a hole through the center of the bale through which the wires that hold the bale together are run. The cotton goes in the top of the machine very much like the meat is put in a sausage machine and comes out the lower end in a roll ready to be baled. When the machine is perfected it will take about five minutes to make a bale. A knife that works automatically cuts the roll of cotton off just the length of the bale and in five minutes more another bale is ready. The greatest advantage of the new kind of bale is the facility that it will give the farmer in handling his crop. The bales are smaller, and being round in form are easier to handle. Another great advantage is in the shipping. The owners of the process claim that twice as much cotton may be put in a car when baled by their process than in the ordinary bales. The oales are encased in cotton duck and held together by four wires, all of which weigh not over two pounds. The cost of covering a bale is 22 cents. All together, it is claimed that the saving on every bale of cotton to all parties will be between $3 and $4 per bale.

A company with a capital of $5,000,000 has been organized to manufacture the machine and introduce it in the country. It is proposed to organize branch companies in each State with local capital. The owners of the machine say that they will have it ready in time to handle all of the next crop, and that it will revolutionize the cotton business.

This new process of baling cotton is known as the Lowry process, from the name of the inventor. Mr. George A. Lowry, who invented the machine, is the man who, some years ago, invented a machine for taking the bristles off hogs. He sold the invention to the Armour for $100,000.—Atlanta Journal.

Rheumatism

Is a blood disease and only a blood remedy can cure it. So many people make the mistake of taking remedies which at best are only tonics and cannot possibly reach their trouble. Mr. Asa Smith, Greencastle, Indiana, says: "For years I have suffered with Sciatic Rheumatism, which the best physicians were unable to relieve. I took many patent medicines but they did not seem to reach my trouble. I gradually grew worse until I was unable to take my food or handle myself in any way; I was absolutely helpless. Three bottles of S.S.S. relieved me so that I was soon able to move my right arm; before long I could walk across the room, and when I had finished one dozen bottles was cured completely and am as well as ever. I now weigh 170."

A Real Blood Remedy. S.S.S. cures Scrofula, Cancer, Eczema, and any form of blood troubles. If you have a blood disease, take a blood medicine—S.S.S. (guaranteed purely vegetable) is recommended for the blood and is recommended for nothing else. It forces out the poison matter permanently. We will send to anyone our valuable books.
