COUNTY CAMPAIGN.

During last week four campaign meetings were held—Berea, Rehoboth, Parksville and Republican. It was our pleasure to attend the first three of these meetings with Mr. A. A. Glover.

The meeting at Berea, though not as large as some of the others, was an ideal one. Col. J. P. Hagood, who performed the duty of chairman, would in his introductions outstep many of the speakers.

BELLS OUT OF TUNE.

Some papers of the state are still using, with a factional significance, the terms "Conservative" and "Reformer." Such papers may be sweet bells but they are dreadfully out of tune.

Even some of the politicians in covert speech endeavor to appeal to the few who have not altogether forgotten the strife of several years ago.

DON'T WAIT.

If you know how SCOTT'S EMULSION would build you up, increase your weight, strengthen your weak throat and lungs and put you in control.

Lightful dinner which was liberally patronized. Friday being an off day the candidates leisurely made their way to Republican where the last session of the summer school of oratory was held on Saturday.

The little fisticuff that Latimer and Hemphill engaged in at Gaffney is not calculated to win any votes for them.

The most remarkable campaign ever conducted in Edgefield county is nearing its close. Instead of the usual discord and strife perfect harmony has prevailed.

The primary election is near at hand and it is the duty of every citizen to lay aside all prejudice and vote for the most competent men from United States Senator down to magistrate.

We hope that Edgefield county will give Hon John J. McMahan, candidate for State Superintendent of Education, a large majority. His defeat would be a public calamity.

DR. MOFFETT'S TEETHINA (TEETHING POWDERS)

Rev. J. W. Berry (of Arkansas Methodist Conference, writes) "I packed and sent you for which please mail me two packages of TEETHINA."

MY BOY.

South Carolina Baptist.

About the year 1841 I taught a country school in the Blocker or Lake neighborhood, just ten miles north of Edgefield Court House.

On the jumps back.

There was a pushing and shoving, and the ropes were bulging with the pressure of men, women and children. As I came down from the dressing room I noticed two girls outside the ropes, of about 14 and 16, and inside the rope a youngster of 8 or 9.

George Cuppy had helped me in no end of ascents, and because of his coolness, judgment and absolute reliability, I had come to trust my life in his hands with the utmost confidence.

The "Little Nassau" was already filled and straining at the guys. The parachute lay flat along the ground and beyond it the trapeze, I tossed aside my overcoat, took my position, and gave the signal to let go.

What had happened? I waved my hand to show that I had heard, and began to think. Had something gone wrong with the parachute? Why should I ride the balloon down instead of making the jump, which thousands were waiting to see?

I have had my balloon catch fire in mid-air. I have hung on the cornice of a 10-story house. I have dropped like a bullet for 600 feet when a parachute was slow in opening; but never have I felt so weak and faint and sick as when I staggered toward the unscratched boy and gripped him by the arm.

How would you like to go in for the business?

"He cheered up at once," and asked, "Do you get good pay?" "But the 'Little Nassau' beginning to cool, had started on its long descent, and ran into counter currents which bobbed it roughly about. This swung the boy around pretty lively, snatching him into the bag quite severely.

"You just hold on to that rope! If you don't I'll thrash you within an inch of your life when I get you down on the ground! Understand?" "Yes-yes, sir," he whimpered, and I saw that the thing had worked.

"When are you going to jump?" he asked. "That's what I came up to see. I was sorry to disappoint him, but I wasn't going to make any jump. But he objected to that. 'It said so in the papers,' he said.

"Hold on tight!" I shouted, swinging down from one trapeze by my hands in order to make a landing on my feet.

"Tommy Dermott," I said when I had got my nerves back somewhat. "Tommy Dermott, I'm going to lay you across my knee and give you the creeps thrashing a boy ever got in the world's history."

QUAINT AND CURIOUS.

In Siberia a winter rainbow sometimes lasts almost all day. It is caused by fine particles of snow suspended in the air.

Unique properties are possessed by the River Tinto, in Spain. It petrifies the sand of its bed, and if a stone falls in the stream and alights upon another, in a few minutes they unite and become one stone. Fish cannot live in its waters.

In the city of Heidelberg, Germany, there is a building called the Church of the Holy Ghost, which is unique in its way, being the only church in the world in which the Protestant and Catholic services are held at the same time, a partition wall through the center separating the two congregations.

The members of the United Methodist Free Church, Overton, near Wrexham, England, have hit upon a unique idea of raising the wind. It was decided to have an egg service, and members of the congregation were invited to bring eggs. Over 1000 which were placed in and around the pulpit, were brought and readily sold.

In the center of a field at Waverhill, Suffolk, England, is a large flat stone covering the grave of a man which died in 1852, inscribed as follows: "Polka. She never made a false step. Ecclesiastes 3, 19th verse." A reference to chapter and verse shows the following: "For that which befalleth the sons of men befalleth beasts, even so that which befalleth the one befalleth the other." This is probably the only instance of a text from the Scriptures appearing on a memorial stone to an animal.

As the date of the coronation approached his thoughts recurred with increasing frequency, it is said, to this prophecy.

Twice in King Edward's career have public prayers been offered for him, and once a public thanksgiving for his recovery. On his return from Wales in 1800, his ship, the Hero, was delayed by storms. Anxiety was so great that special services were held in all the churches of the kingdom.

The help to the British throne is King Edward's second child, George Frederick Ernest Albert, Prince of Wales. The eldest child of Edward and Queen Alexandra was Prince Albert Victor Christian Edward, the Duke of Clarence, who was born at Frogmore on January 8, 1864, and died at Sandringham on January 14, 1892.

There is so little level land in Norway that the making of lay enough to last during the long winter is a very serious problem. Most of the necessary grass is grown on little mountain terraces, sometimes 2000 or 3000 feet above the farmhouse.

Passengers on an elevated railway train this morning who happened to be looking out of the car windows saw a strange thing. A district messenger boy was leaning against a stoop reading a paper-covered novel, utterly oblivious to all that was going on around him.

A Bull Run Tree. At the historic field of Bull Run today, the guide leads his visitors to a certain cedar tree that grew so much faster than the others in that locality that an investigation was made, revealing that it had grown over the remains of an unknown soldier, which had not been carried away to Arlington with the others.—San Francisco Argonaut.

As will readily be imagined the deposits increased rapidly, and on the 7th inst. a large crowd assembled in front of the welcome visitor's dwelling to receive back their moneys with interest. They were told, however, to return after a week, and obeyed. On their coming again at the end of the week they were asked to wait till the evening; but when evening came and still there were no signs of payment, the mob grew impatient, and the sub-inspector of Naddilgram Tiana, Rai Charan Ghose, with twenty-seven policemen appeared on the scene and ordered them to disperse. The men asked him to help them to recover their money, but as he apparently did nothing, he persisted in the endeavor to disperse them, they assaulted him, and when he sought refuge in a hut, locked him in and set fire to the place, so that he was burned alive.

Such is the story which, it is stated, is now being inquired into by the district superintendent of police, who has made several arrests. According to one report the police visited for the purpose of stopping gambling, and their interference was resented in the way described. The villagers, however, declare that they have been done out of fifty-two thousand rupees.—Lahore Tribune.

months ago a stranger arrived at the town and announced that money deposited with him would be returned at the end of one week, with fifty percent interest. This promise having been faithfully observed in the case of several depositors, there was a general rush to deposit money with the stranger, the villagers even pawning their goods and chattels to convert them into cash.

Beware of High Chairs. A young lady of small stature recently fainted at a dinner given in her honor. It was then found she had not been able to touch either of her feet to the floor or her back to the chair, and the restricted circulation and prolonged discomfort had finally overcome her. An antiquarian traces the present mania for high seats to the fact that at the old French courts sets of handsome furniture were ranged along the walls for effect, but never occupied. The chairs and sofas actually used were much lower. Furniture makers of today copy the more showy pieces and further enhance their inability by spring cushions. The dictum of a famous cabinet maker is that in choosing chairs the knee of a person standing should clear above the seat he intends to occupy.—Popular Science News.

Education. A well meaning man feels rather small when, after wrestling for 10, 20, 30 years with the question of "will" or "shall," "would" or "should," he gives it up and settles down at old age with a compromise on an apostrophe. "I'll do it," or "I'd do it," satisfies all except the most hypercritical taste, leaving the reader to expand and extend as he pleases.—New York Press.
