WEDNESDAY, AUG. 8, 1906.

I never drink—I cannot do so on equal terms with others.—It costs them only one day; but it costs me three; the first in sinning, the second in suffering, and the third in repeating.—STERNE.

Does anybody know how the candidates for the House stand on the Brice bill?

H. H. Evans says he hasn't been called a thief. If he hasn't it is an oversight—he has been called everything else.—Spartanburg Herald.

Only twenty days remain for the campaign liars to get in their work. Pay absolutely no heed to what you hear, unless it is vouched for by men of unquestioned integrity.

Judging from the following clipped from the Keowee Courier prohibition is proving to be very satisfactory in Oconee county: "It is reported to us that a drunken man was seen in Walhalla last Saturday. It's a rare animal in this community, and the next one that appears should be caged."

While listening to public speakers who are candidates for office, weigh well what they say, so as to be able to separate the wheat from the chaff. The man who amuses the audience by telling funny jokes is not always the one who makes the best speech. Generally such a speaker says far less than one who discusses the issues of the day in detail.

Here is what Sheriff J. W. Sanders says concerning prohibition in Union county: "When the dispensary was here, the jail was nearly full. Now it is often almost empty. There is not one-fifth the drunkenness in this county now that there was in dispensary days, and I do not believe the majority of the people would have the dispensary back."

Prohibition is suppressing liquor in Edgefield, all statements to the contrary notwithstanding. The attendance upon court has been unusually large this week, and yet we have never seen better deportment upon our streets. The perfect order that has been maintained is a matter of public knowledge can anyone, in the face of this, say that it is better to have liquor sold in Edgefield?

Doubtless our sister town of Johnston is somewhat surfeited on political speeches. Senator Tillman addressed a large audience on Saturday for more than two hours, discussing everything in general and the dispensary, compulsory education and the State in particular. Johnston had a second installment of oratory on Monday, at which time the county candidates presented their claims. Just what effect these meetings had, we do not know, for we could not attend either. The people of our county are doing their own thinking upon the questions of the day, and are talking but little.

"Anything to beat Lyon," seems to be the shibboleth of the friends of the dispensary over the state. Why should it be so? He came nearer doing his full duty than any other member of the investigating committee. Had he not worked so persistently and so indefatigably very little or no corruption would have been unearthed. The Abbeville Press and Banner, Mr. Lyon's home paper, which is also a very strong friend of Senator Tillman, has the following to say of him: "The many friends of Mr. J. Frazer Lyon are proud to see the 'ovation' given him while on the campaign. He is a high-toned gentleman of honest heart and purpose, and is capable and efficient to discharge the duties of any office to which he will aspire and is sure not to betray the confidence of those who honor him with their suffrage."

COLD SPRING. Mr. Milledge Glanton died at his home near Antioch Saturday evening and was buried at Red Hill Sunday afternoon at three o'clock. Bro. Littlejohn conducted the funeral service. Mr. Glanton had been sick with fever for several weeks. His sickness, however, was not thought to be serious until about fifteen minutes before his death. He was about forty years old, and was beloved by all who knew him. This was shown by the great congregation that attended his funeral. He leaves a wife, three children, mother, step-father, two sisters, one brother and a host of friends to mourn his loss. Mr. Glanton was a consistent member of Red Hill church. We extend our prayers and sympathy to the bereaved ones.

A series of meetings are being conducted at Antioch this week. Rev. W. E. Wilkins of Columbia will be with our pastor next week at Rehoboth in a series of meetings.

Mrs. J. T. Littlejohn and two little boys of Robo Cottage are visiting friends in Laurens this week.

Mrs. Ida Bodie, and Misses Mattie and Nellie Dorn, of Augusta, are visiting Mr. and Mrs. James Bodie this week.

Miss Bessie Holmes visited friends at Modoc last week.

Mr. O. J. Holmes has purchased a new top buggy.

It was Preston Stone not Preston Strom that has the five acres of cotton that he expects to get six bales from.

Mr. John Blackwell, of Parksville, was on our streets last week.

Mr. Sidney Wash of Atlanta is visiting his mother, Mrs. Emma Wash, this week.

Misses Jennie and Tillie Gilchrist are spending a few days with friends at Ninety Six.

Mrs. Gillam, of Aiken, is visiting at Rehoboth, and drinking that life giving water.

Mr. R. A. Cochran made a business trip to Columbia last week.

Mr. Milton Bussey thinks that the nearest way to Edgefield is by Modoc. Watch Mitou.

Rev. C. E. Burts visited Rose Cottage last Saturday.

ROSE COTTAGE.

A Voice From Parksville Again Raised Against Whiskey.

Mr. Editor: I write hurriedly to-day while I am resting, to thank you for your reply to Bro. Jas. P. Bean. Bro. Bean is a good fellow, but I hardly took his first article seriously, as I know Bro. Bean loves to "argify," and having nothing else to do, and great learning, simply wrote for amusement. I think your first reply grand and your second better.

No one knows better than Bro. Temperance that the Bible is an ancient book representing an ancient civilization and must be interpreted in the light of these facts. The Scripture he quotes is all right, but we know that the wines drunk then were made from fruits, and a person that had the stomach of a cow that could hold a gallon and was hoggish enough, could get drunk on it, but the people drank it for its fruit flavor, and as a food, it having a very small per cent of alcohol. Why Bro. Bean could prove polygamy by the Old Testament and I hardly know where to expect him to hop up next.

Civilization has been improved since David's time, the man after God's own heart about whom Bro. Bean wrote in his first article. David was a very great and good man, if he did drink wine, but he was also a polygamist. We would hardly expect Bro. Bean, though not so great a man as David, to be put in the same class with him.

It ought to be improved, not by who bibbers since David's time, but by the teaching and life of the lowly Nazarene, the spirit of which is against the teaching of our brother.

"Avoid the very appearance of evil" is the spirit of the Master. Seriously, Mr. Editor, I don't think the position of our friend is worth noticing extendedly. The spirit of the New Testament is against him; science is against him, because it is practically agreed among all scientists that alcohol is a poison, and we don't believe our God would send us a message by even so good a man as Mr. Bean, to teach our children to take a poison as a beverage.

However particular we should be to caution them against excess, experience is against him, for we have known drunkards made by his formula; reason is against him, because we all know that but for the first drink, there would be no drunkards; conscience is against him, because no man however drunken he may be, can conscientiously teach his children to take a poison; even moderately as a beverage; common sense is against him, because the veriest fool on earth knows that there has never been a better plan suggested to make drunkards, than to teach it to children.

Allow me, Mr. Editor, to close by quoting a part of my report to the association and re-affirm the position then taken on the liquor question. I said: "The curse of God is upon it, the prayers of Christian women are against it; the tears of anguish shed by broken-hearted wives, and neglected children rise up in passionate protest against it; the blood of those who have been slain by strong drink cries out against it."

In the name of fathers and mothers whose sons are being debauched and ruined by strong drink; in the name of widows whose husbands have gone down to drunkards' grave; in the name of orphan children whose fathers have been slain by the drink habit; in the name of homes which have been reduced from happiness and prosperity, to wretchedness and want; in the name of Christianity which seeks to save men from sin; in the name of God and humanity, we call upon every true Christian to put himself on the side of total abstinence.

Respectfully,
D. A. J. Bell.

Colored Summer School Closes.

Having in session for four weeks, the Summer School held in Edgefield, Professor F. A. Peters and John A. Simms came to a close on August 3rd. During the entire session the attendance was very large, the enrollment being as high as 125. The teachers took their departure for their several homes on Friday, carrying with them good will and warm friendship for the people of Edgefield, while the students showed their hospitality and kindness toward them while in their midst. The Summer School was in every way a success. The teachers manifested a lively interest in their work from the beginning to the end, and returned to their homes with their minds much improved and enlightened on the latest methods of teaching. Milton Strother.
