Col Watson, of South Carolina, Writes Encouragingly

OF SOUTH'S FUTURE ON COTTON

A Thoughtful and Optimistic Article Written, by Request, for the South-

Col. E. J. Watson, commissioner of agriculture and immigration, was asked recently by Southern Mills, a well known publication for a special article on the cotton crop situation. Col Watson has prepared a very thoughtful article in which he expresses optimistic views as to the future of the cotton growers. His article is as fol-

The cotton situation as I see it, particularly in the South, is one full of promise to the grower, the buyer, the local consumer and the exporter. Cotton is a monoply that belongs to the Southern States of the United States and neither greed, science nor treachery can rob the South of that monopoly. It is God given. It is a monopoly whose power must of necessity grow as the population of the world increases.

The great mystery about it all is that the Southerner persists in failure to realize his potency—the value of his own strength. Why the producer of cotton sits down and serenely permits the man who knows the power of that monopoly-the middleman in distant marketing centersto rob his bucket of milk of all the rich cream, is almost beyond comprehension. But he has been doing it for years; he is doing it now and it almost seems that he resents, the attempt of any one to show him where his inferests lie and hew he can save the millions of dollars which now go from his crop to sustain the high living of the men who handle cotton and cotton products in New York and across the water.

Let the Southern planter once realze that he has the power to say how his crop shall be marketed; let him begin to export his product to the markets of the world, dealing directly with the important consumer through direct shipment from a strict cotton belt seaport, and then you will see rolls of money now spent in commissions, terminal charges and so on ad infinitum-all of which the farmer himself pays—remaining in the hands of Southern producers.

No crop in the known world is handled to the consumer as cotton is handled; no crop pays higher tribute sto men whose interests are make as much out of the ducer and owner; no crop tribute to the gambler. The cotton situation in the South, as I have said, is full of promise; so it is; but not as full as it might be if the Southern producer would but claim his rights, put a stop to costly and indirect marketing and deal digate every phase of this feature tment is salted in the proportion of of the handling of the South's staalf a cup of salt to two quarts of ple crop at home and abroad and offiially I am now engaged in a work that may perhaps sooner or later effectively break some of these artificial bonds now holding the producer of cotton to only a share of his own profits and a very small share at that. The same thing is true of the get his product direct to market, to the consumer, and an era of prosperity and a tide of development will sweep over the South Atlantic States that no power, real or artificial can

Can the imagination picture the arrival of the time when the world's demand for crude cotton will not be ever-increasing? Not so long as the world's population increases, and not so long as cotton, as it must do, continues to be the chief article going to the known world. I use the term

'ever-increasing" advisedly. The demand for cotton products grows more rapidly than the development and increase of production and the time is not far distant when the production of twice the acreage of today will be in demand and when by better a more careful methods of cultivation the yield per acre will be double what it is today.

Many have thought that the immense development of cotton manu facturing in the Southern States and the increase of this industry in New England would curb foreign developments, but this is not true. In England this year in one district alone there will be put in operation new mills equalling almost the entire manufacturing espacity of the State of North Carolina.

Over on the continent enlargements and new plants are the order of the day. Even the cotton gamblers in New York can not under such conditions, force down the price of cotton beyond a reasonable profit, and I do not believe that there will ever be a period of serious depression again. The farmer should see to it that he does not sell his cotton cheaper to the foreign consumer and that he puts into his own pocket all that proportion of what really belongs to him that is now being indiscriminately taken in and in commissions by people who have no interest in his welfare or his country. And the manufacturer is in the same sized canoe paddling alongside complacently. If the producer and the Southern manufacturer would knock a few holes in the wall that has been sur rounding them, pay a little more attention to what the "other fellow" is doing, know more about where this erude cotton is finally marketed and how, and cease chasing the lightning bugs in the shape of politicians who consume their time trifling with matters most often of concern only to the politician's local welfare, and awake to a full realization of their tremen dous advantage of geographical location and climate conditions and be come conscious of their own power upon industrial lines and their ability to control a good share of the commerce of the world, then will come an

Then will come prosperity and plenelevation for both capital and labor | trial centers. But even with conditions continuing as they are, with no rapid improve.

A grasshopper can j ment, the day for smaller crops than its own length, era of prosperity in the South that

America has not yet seen in any sec-

ed; and I believe that the day of starvation prices for cotton has likewise passed. The only element of uncertainity in the situation as I see it is whence will come the labor to operate the steadily increasing number of manufacturing plants and at the same time cultivate and barvest the likewise ever-increasing crop. The present labor supply is not increasing sufficiently from natural causes; the black man can not be used in the manufacturing plants and the black man working on his own account as tenant, share cropper or owner can not get the maximum from the soil or increase productiveness.

With the influx of white small farmers of intelligence in the South the land of promise may indeed be said to be in full view, provided the Southern planter and the Southern manufacturer advance hand in hand intelligently claiming their God-given rights in the world of commerce.

GREAT BOND ISSUE MADE

Big Enough Proposition to Hold the Attention of Wall Street-Purpose of the Bonds.

New York, Special.-Great interest is manifested in Wall Street in the proposed $115,000,000 bond issue of the St. Louis & San Francisco Railroad Company, which will be authorized at a meeting of the stockholders. The issue will be composed of general lien 15 and 20 year gold bonds the 5 per cent. yearly. Of the total amount, $67,818,000 will be reserved to retire and refund bonds and notes maturing during the next 45 years. Only $10,000,000 will be issued during the next two years for improvements and additions while the balance of $37,187,000 can be issued only after June 1, 1909 to finance various capital requirements As but $7,125,000 in notes and no bonds mature between now and June 1, 1909, it appears that in the next two years only $17,125,000 of the new bonds will be issued.

The stockholders will also authorize an increase of $100,000,000 in common stock. This is merely a formality as under the Missouri laws the authorized debt cannot exceed the authorized stock.

In some parts of the East farmers are giving up wheat growing. Many of them think it useless to try and compete with the newer and richer soils of the West. Many argue that wheat growing is profitable only on new and rich soil. Mr. C. R. W. W. W. St. of Westfald Nav. Paymerick But Sulphur Should Be Used in Liquid Form Only. Many argue that wheat growing is profitable only on new and rich soil. Mr. C. R. McKenzie, of Westfield. If eselected a piece of dark loam, slightly gravelly soil which had had no fertilizer for ten years. It had been in grass, and farmers can readily understand its poor condition for grain. In order to test the soil. Mr. McKenzie used nothing on one nart of the field. On another part he used Thomas Phosphate to supply phosphoric acid and uitrate of soda to supply nitrogen. On another part he used the phosphate and the nitrate and in addition, muriate of potash. The object of this was to see

The natural soil gave only 10 hushels. The phosphate and the nitrate brought the yield to 25 bushels, but when the potash was added there was an increased yield of 16 bushels per acre. It is evident that this increase was directly due to the potash, and when we compare the cost of the potash with the price received for 16 bushels of wheat we see that few other farm investments could have paid so well. Consider the price of wheat and straw of an Eastern farm and it is plain that no Western wheat field can compare acre for "Last year, after having my little girl treated by a very prominent physician for an obstinate case of eczema, I resorted to the Cuticura Remedies, and was so well pleased with the almost instantaneous relief afforded that we discarded the physiacre with such a yield as 40 bushels.
