President Roosevelt, Answers Charge of Playing Politics

GIVES REASONS FOR HIS ACTS

Chief Executive Characterizes the Charges as "Falsely Malicious" and in an Exceedingly Lengthy Reply to William Dudley Poole, of Richmond, Indiana, He Enters Into a Detailed Defense

Washington, Spent a President Roosevelt, has made answer to the recent statements that he has made in regard to the nomination of a President in the future to further the "presidential" interest of Secretary Taft.

The answer is in the form of a letter addressed to William Dudley Poole, of Richmond, Indiana, and contains a reply to Mr. Poole's charges against the President.

The President begins by characterizing the charges as "falsely and malicious." He follows this with an analysis of all appointments sent by him to the Senate for his action as President in the future to nominate a President in the future to further the "presidential" interest of Secretary Taft.

The President's letter, which is a detailed defense of his actions, is a reply to the charges made by Mr. Poole.
