What men want is not talent; it is purpose; in other words, not the power to achieve, but the will to labor. -BULWER.

It seems now that Martin will be the mud slinger of the senatorial campaign.

Thus far Judge Pritchard's receivers have not received anything—not even their salaries.

By a majority of 152, Aiken county is joined to her idol, the liquor business.

With the student body reduced about forty per cent, Clemson college ought to have a considerable surplus on hand at the close of the present session.

The major portion of the present generation in Aiken county is sowing to the wind, and it will be the misfortune of the generations yet unborn to reap the whirlwind.

We think it is well that Mr. C. O. Featherstone has withdrawn from the race for governor. So nearly identical were his and Governor Ansel's platforms, that almost certain defeat awaited him.

Why should there be two standards for young men and young women? A girl of seventeen years was recently arrested for smoking a cigarette at night upon the streets of New Orleans. If girls are arrested for smoking upon the streets, why should not boys be arrested also, especially those of tender years?

To those who say the county dispensary plan of selling liquor is the most Democratic solution of the whiskey question, we cite the North Augusta figures in the recent Aiken county election. Of the 157 voters in North Augusta, 54 favor the dispensary and 103 oppose it. In spite of this great majority, two to one, a dispensary has been saddled upon that community. Is this not ruthlessly disregarding the Democratic principle of majority rule?

Down, down, cotton has steadily gone, and that, too, just before planting time, which is very unusual. Should this not be sufficient warning to farmers not to "over do the thing" in the matter of planting cotton? The southern spinners have by agreement closed down for sixty days, and it is said that at the expiration of that time a further shut-down may be ordered. If farmers get into trouble by making a record-breaking crop this year, they go into it with their eyes open. Instead of being deceived, sufficient warning is being given.

Converted to Prohibition. Mr. E. H. Anll, of Newberry, one of the most prominent men of the state, and a member of the legislature, a former dispensary advocate, was in Aiken last Tuesday. He states that after having seen prohibition "in action" in his county he is convinced that it is a great improvement over the dispensary system and that Newberry would under no condition return to the liquor traffic.—Aiken Journal and Review.

The successful operation of prohibition has also caused many thoughtful men in Edgefield county to change their views on this great question. We, the people of Edgefield, are not directly concerned about the success or failure of prohibition in Maine or Kansas, but about its success here at our very doors. If it has decreased the consumption of intoxicants, and practically stopped their sale, have the moral courage to say so.

Committee Makes Investigations Along the Savannah River.

The special committee appointed at the last session of the legislature to investigate the dams on the Savannah river, as to whether they were maintaining proper fish ways had its first meeting in Augusta, on Tuesday, the 14th inst. The members of the committee are Senator J. R. Earle, of Oconee county, and Representatives E. M. Rucker, of Anderson, and B. E. Nicholson, of Edgefield. After organizing the committee went up to the locks, and inspected the dam and fish way, and found that in their opinion, the present fish way would not allow the passage of fish up the river, and is not at all satisfactory. The committee also found that the Savannah river is being fished with nets, fish traps, and other contrivances, to such an extent below the dam that it is very difficult for fish to over reach the dam. After visiting the locks the committee conferred with the authorities of the city of Augusta, with a view to securing their co-operation in providing a new and more satisfactory fish way. They had the assurance of Mayor Dunbar and the city engineer, that they would be glad to co-operate in improving the fish way. It is the purpose of the committee to get an expert from the U. S., board of fisheries to come to the city of Augusta, and inspect the present fish way, and to draw up the plans for a proper fish way. The city authorities promised to construct a fish way in accordance with such plans as may be recommended by the committee, if within a reasonable cost. Mr. P. F. Markert, Dr. H. Townes, Mr. L. F. Dorn and several other citizens of Edgefield county met the committee at the locks, and extended many courtesies to them. Mr. Markert carried the committee from the locks back to the city of Augusta in his new gasoline launch. The trip down the canal with Mr. Markert was very enjoyable, and he gave the committee a good deal of information as to the local conditions.

It is the purpose of the committee to inspect the river between Augusta and Savannah, in order to see whether the laws with regard to fishing are being violated, and also the visit the dam at Gregg Shoals, in Anderson county. The committee may recommend the appointment of an officer to patrol the river between Augusta and Savannah, and that the fishermen do not obstruct the passage of fish up the river.

B. E. Nicholson.

Patterson Busy With Pensions.

A most remarkable case of last week was that of R. I. Sisson, of South Carolina, heard before the committee on claims. Congressman J. O. Patterson introduced a bill to refund to Sisson the amount of loss of personal property sustained by him while in the service of the government, and was given a hearing on the same this week. He very strongly laid before the committee the facts, telling how Sisson had been kept in the light-house on the little island of Daufuskie, just off the coast of Carolina and near the city of Savannah, Ga., for the past thirty years; recalled the facts of history concerning a terrific storm which swept all of his personal property to ruin. By his persuasive appeal for Sisson he obtained a favorable report on his bill, which enjoys the distinction of being possibly the first ever secured on any bill of just this nature.

Mr. Patterson has also been doing some very active work before the committee on pensions lately. He has taken up and pressed to a favorable report the increase of pensions from $8 to $12 per month, for two widows of the Indian War veterans, viz: Mrs. Carrie Trotter, of Saluda; and Mrs. Elizabeth Ann Langford, of Brunson; a Mexican War widow was also granted the same amount of increase. Mrs. Sathro Feagle, of Saluda; while bills allowing an increase of the same amount for Mrs. Lucretia Grice, of Wards; and Mrs. Sarah D. Jones, of Franklin have been persistently urged until they also were added to the list of favorable reports secured by South Carolina's Congressman.—Barnwell Sentinel.

Successful Contestants.

The writer of the essay published in last week's Advertiser was Miss Hattie Barr of Johnston graded school. A prize of $7.00 was awarded her. The next prize of $5.00 was won by a student of the Colliers school, and the third prize of $3.00 by Miss Frances Burgess, of Edgefield. The successful essays on "Harm in a glass of beer" were written by Marion Wright of Trenton which is published in this issue, and Lucia King of Johnston. The judges ask that an explanation be made in reference to their decision. There were some better essays perhaps than the ones which won prizes, but they did not deal with the main subject. For instance, the essays on "Value of total abstinence to a life" treated mostly of evils of intemperance, rather than the value of abstinence. More than one hundred essays came in for examination from the following schools:

Miss Eva Rushton, 6th grade, Johnston; Miss McMillan, 7th grade, Johnston; Miss Brockington, 8th grade, Johnston; Miss Hortense Padgett, 5th grade, Edgefield; Miss Minnie Dicks, 6th grade, Edgefield; Miss Hattie Newsom, 7th grade, Edgefield; Prof. G. F. Loog, Trenton; Miss Maggie Reel, Lott school; Miss Kellah Fowler, Clark's Hill; Miss Pauline Byrd, Limestone school; Miss Nelle Watson, Rogers; Miss Juddie Fanning, Colliers; Miss Mattie Middleton, Beaverdam school; Miss Lucy Briggs, Victoria Institute; Prof. P. P. Burns, Edgefield; Miss Mamie Walker, White Town; Miss Jennie Gilchrist, Rehoboth; Miss Robbie Jones, Franklin.

This was not more than half the essays written but were selected papers from most of the schools. Some schools had the children to write papers but did not send them in. The same opportunity will be given all our students again next year.

Called to Meet. To J. C. Sheppard, S. T. Williams, B. E. Nicholson, Wm. P. Calhoun, A. E. Padgett, S. B. Mays, W. A. Strom, Kenneth Baker, E. H. Aull, Wm. Coleman: Whereas, by an act of the General Assembly of the state of South Carolina, approved—day of February, 1908, you, with the undersigned, were appointed a board of corporators to incorporate the Edgefield and Augusta Electric Railway Company, which was duly chartered in and by said act of the General Assembly. This is to notify you that a meeting of the said board of corporators will be held in my office at Edgefield, S. C., on Saturday, May 9th, 1908, for the purpose of organization, and for such other business as may come before the meeting.

Respectfully, B. E. Nicholson, Chairman.

New Mayor and Council Installed.

The last meeting of the old council was held on Thursday afternoon last. A notice of contest of the recent election by Wm. P. Calhoun was read by the mayor. After disposing of all routine business, Mayor W. W. Adams administered the oath of office to Mr. C. E. May, the newly elected mayor, who at once assumed the duties of the office. Upon retiring, Mr. Adams expressed his appreciation for the kind consideration that he had received at the hands of the council during his administration, and offered his support and co-operation to the incoming officers of the town.

Mr. C. E. May administered the oath of office to all of the wardens except Mr. B. Murrell, who was absent. Mr. M. P. Wells was re-elected mayor pro tem, and Mr. W. H. Hartling was re-elected clerk and treasurer. The mayor will announce the standing committees at the meeting to be held on Saturday morning next. At that time two marshals will be elected. In this issue an official notice of the election of the marshals will be found.

Young Men's Sunday in Edgefield.

All the religious services in Edgefield last Sunday were held in the interest of the young men of the town. Mr. G. C. Huntington, the Y. M. C. A. secretary of the Carolinas, addressed the congregation in the morning at the Baptist church, and his assistant, Mr. J. E. Johnson, spoke to the Baraca boys during the Sunday school hour.

Rev. A. C. Bridgman, formerly a Y. M. C. A. secretary but now a theological student at the Presbyterian seminary in Columbia, presented with great force and earnestness the cause of the Y. M. C. A. in the Presbyterian church on Sunday morning.

In the afternoon a largely attended men's meeting was held at the Methodist church. Rev. Mr. Bridgman, who, on account of his intimate association with young men knows of their peculiar temptations and needs, delivered a very stirring address that left its impress upon the audience.

Sunday evening a union service was held at the Baptist church. The different departments of the work among young men in the Carolinas were presented and emphasized in short but very effective addresses by Rev. A. C. Bridgman, Mr. J. E. Johnson and Mr. G. C. Huntington. When the series of services closed, everyone felt that a very pleasant and profitable day had been spent. Our community is greatly indebted to these Christian workers for the earnest efforts in behalf of the young men of Edgefield.

PRIZE ESSAY Written by Master Marion Wright of Trenton High School, Prof. G. F. Long, Principal.

"The Harm in a Glass of Beer."

Formerly only the comparatively few, belonging to the wealthier class of people used alcoholic drinks as a beverage. There was a naturally limited production. Excessive use of such drinks began with the art of distilling, which made it possible to produce strong whiskey and similar drinks from corn, rice and other grain, in an inexpensive manner. With this wide spread production of alcoholic drinks there has arisen a group of physical and mental disorders that are becoming more and more alarming in degree.

The average glass of beer contains about six and twenty-five one hundredths per cent alcohol. True this is a very small amount but it is sufficient to create a longing for more.

First let us determine whether or not beer is a food. Food is any substance which when taken into the body, produces heat or strength. It is sometimes claimed for beer that it has the special advantage of producing bodily heat. This is a mistaken idea, for as is plainly shown by the clinical thermometer of the physician, beer lowers the temperature of the body. The blood is sent to the skin by this agency. This gives a sensation of heat. We feel warmer but we are actually cooler. The more blood there is at the surface of the body the more quickly is the temperature lowered.

Let us now endeavor to trace the effect of alcohol in the beer on the various organs of the body. Chronic catarrh of the stomach is frequently due to beer-drinking. In fact physicians agree that the excessive use of alcoholic drinks is the only frequent cause of the disease.

Beer-drinking causes a shrinking and hardening of the liver. The true liver substance gradually ceases to act and finally dies. The substance which takes its place is of no aid to digestion, for it secretes nothing, but simply holds together in one compact mass the numerous liver cells that do the work. This connective tissue increases in size, thus squeezing the liver cells out of shape, and prevents their proper action so that they die from disease. This condition causes a disease known as cirrhosis of the liver.

Beer-drinking lessens the ability of the blood to absorb oxygen, thus making it poorer in quality, and less able to do the great work of nourishing the tissues. The blood vessels soon show the effects of beer-drinking. On the interior lining of the arteries fatty matter slowly accumulates. It entirely takes the place of the tough, elastic material of which the blood vessels should be composed, and often they burst.

Alcohol over-stimulates the heart, causes the muscles to be overworked, deprives the heart of a certain degree of rest, so necessary to perfect health, and from overaction develops a weakness in the nerves that control the action of the heart. After some years use, beer deposits of fat occur between the muscle fibers of the heart, thereby weakening them. These weak muscles are unable to exert the proper force necessary to send the blood to the various parts of the body.

Beer does lasting injury to the muscles. Deposits of fat take the place of muscular fiber. Men endure more hard labor, cold, etc., when they never use beer. The athlete who wishes to compete in athletic contests is forbidden by his trainer to taste any alcoholic drink. Besides destroying the strength of his muscles, beer-drinking diminishes the power of endurance and precision.

Beer-drinking does great injury to the lungs. It acts directly on the breathing center located at the base of the brain, thus diminishing the amount of air taken into the lungs. The walls of the tiny air sacs become thickened and less elastic and the breathing capacity of the lungs is slowly reduced. There is always less power to resist any lung disease among beer drinkers. This limited breathing power, or starvation soon takes away from the individual his power of endurance and decreases his general bodily vigor.

In the kidneys there comes a noticeable change. In the beer-drinker the kidneys are compelled to work beyond their power in separating the alcohol poison from the blood. The overwork of the kidneys may cause that most fearful of maladies, Bright's disease. This inability of the kidneys to remove the poison from the blood, must necessarily react upon the other organs of the body. Dr. Formis says: "In chronic alcoholics the kidneys are often increased in size, showing that degenerative changes have taken place in these organs." Besides causing many diseases and lessening the general bodily vigor, beer-drinking diminishes the power of the user to resist the attacks of numerous diseases. We frequently see this illustrated in cases of pneumonia. In this disease the effects are more severe from the first, more rapid in their course and more serious in their results.

The strong young man who drinks a glass of beer, thinks not that in the course of time he shall be robbed of his strength. He thinks not that he who walks now so steadily and firm, shall in the future slinger and reel. Let us now turn our attention to the mental effects of beer-drinking. More than half the cases of insanity in America to-day are the direct results of alcoholic excesses. There is no form of insanity known to the experts of today that cannot be caused by alcohol.

Beer-drinking may and often does cause one of the most hideous forms of insanity, known as mania. The patient imagines that he is wealthy, prominent and possessed of unlimited strength. If one dare disturb these pleasant thoughts he is attacked by the maniac. And woe to the person of inferior strength, for in the battle with a madman there is no appeal either to mercy or reason. Beer-drinking causes a form of insanity known as melancholia. The patient is sad and depressed, and often tries to commit suicide. Another form of insanity that is sometimes caused by beer-drinking is known as dipsomania. The patient manifests at certain times an uncontrollable desire for alcoholic drinks. During these periods he will murder if necessary in order to gratify his desires. It is hereditary.

Delirium Tremens is a temporary form of insanity due alone to alcoholic excesses. In nearly every case the patient has visions of demons, vipers, etc., that strike terror to his soul. Seventeen per cent of the patients die. No beer drinker thinks that he will ever rave behind asylum bars. It may never come to that, but scientific experiments show conclusively that beer weakens the brain.

We have now arrived at the most important side of a man's nature, his moral side. One of the first signs of moral degeneration is the loss of will power. The will, like the muscles, is strengthened by exercise. Today we refuse to eat food that we do not need and to-morrow it is easier to repeat the act. But if to-day, we do anything for the mere gratification of our appetites to-morrow it is harder for us to resist the same temptation. If we never exercise the will it dies. And with the loss of will power there goes the loss of character, for the will is the basis of habit, and habits determine character. Success in life is assured to the person having a strong, ready and resolute will. All his promises will be kept, his duties discharged. Let us illustrate the advantage of having one's will as an ally in the temptations of life. A gentleman had yielded to the entreaties of his friends and promised never to drink alcoholic drinks again. He faithfully kept his pledge for a number of weeks but it seems that fate was against him. One day he met two of his former friends upon the street and was asked to take a drink. He refused—until one of the base wretches shoved the bottle to his face. The recent carried him back to former days when as a drunkard he reeled along the street. Snatching the bottle, he drained its contents. They carried him home, beastly drunk and that night he died in a drunken stupor. Why? Because through habit his will had become his enemy rather than his ally.

There is a very close connection between the body, the mind and the soul. Anything that effects one effects the other two. We have clearly shown that a degenerative change takes place in the body and the mind and it follows that such a change occurs. John Locke says: "A sound mind in a sound body is a short but full description of a happy state in this world; he that has these two has but little more to wish for, and he that lacks either of them will be but little better for anything else he may possess."
