A New Version.

Lawyers have a peculiar system of abbreviation, such words as trustees, executors being cut down to trees, exors, and admors. This practise led to an amusing slip on the part of a solicitor who, somewhat late in life, abandoned his profession and entered the church. A few Sundays after his ordination he startled his congregation while reading the lesson by delivering one of the passages as follows: "I see men as trustees walking."

Another Tradition Exploded. Two Englishmen were resting at the "Red Horse Inn" at Stratførd-on-Avon. One of them discovered a print picturing a lew tumbling building underneath which was printed: "The House in Which Shakespeare Was Born." Turning to his friend in mild surprise he pointed to the print. His friend exhibited equal surprise, and called a waiter who assured them of the accuracy of the inscription.

"'Pon my word," said the observ ing Englishman, shaking his head dubiously, "I thought he was born in a manger!"-Success Magazine.

A Bernhardt, Trick. Mme. Sarah Bernhardt, who is supposed to be something of an artist as well as an actress, was recently called upon in one of her marvelous creations to enact the role of a sculptor, and to model a certain bust in view of the audience. This fairly electrified the critics, but when going into rhapsodies over the technical skill in handling the clay which Mme. Bernhardt exhibited they showed that they knew little of the artistic tricks of actors and actresses; as a matter of fact, she does nothing of the kind. The bust is modeled and baked, and over it is placed damp clay of the same color. This the talented actress merely pulls off, exposing the beautifully modeled head underneath.

Modern Methods That Are Helpful to Farmer, Fruit Grower and Stockman.

Spurs For Poultrymen.

Prepare for green food for the winter and spring. Sow plenty of rye with a little rape mixed with it. If the poultry house has not yet been built, don't forget to have it completed by the first of November. Where fowls are closely yarded, a few onions cut fine every week or ten days will help to keep their systems n good condition.

If pure bred fowls have not been secured, be in the market at once for some good winter layers, and be ready to start right next spring.

Provide dust box, or keep a portion of ground loosened up after beating rains, so the hen can do her part to keep rid of lice and mites. Do not allow chicks to roost in damp places, or scratch in moldy litter. Roup, canker, chicken-pox and other diseases lurk in such places. If mites are still in the poultry house, reduce the flock to where bird can be handled and greased and dusted, and the poultry house saturated with kerosene, taking especial care to see that the oil penetrates thoroughly underneath the roost poles. It will save much work and loss next season if this is done

See that you do not keep any old hens over the winter just for layers. If a sufficient amount of pullets have not been raised, better sell the old nens and buy pullets. It's the pullets raised only with good winter laying hens) and young hens that lay best in winter.

Cabbage seed sown in early October will be ready to transplant in a little more than a month, and this makes fine food for chicks and older thought that there I would see many fowls in spring and early summer, after rye is tough. #### Choosing Best Layers.

There are a great many methods advertised in various pamphlets and papers stating that, if you will practice this or that method of selecting as laid down in the paper, you will be able to determine the drones from the workers. The writer has tried a few of these so-called certainties, and has come to the conclusion the trap nest is the only accurate test. It is by selection and keeping records that advancement is made along this line.

Each hen has her own individuality; certain hens lay eggs that are in nine cases out of ten hatchable. Some hens lay well, but although their eggs are usually fertile, they will not hatch, whether set under a hen or placed in the best incubator. The chicks develop to a certain size, in many cases being fully formed, but die in the shell. Again, many hens lay eggs that are seldom fertile. In selecting birds one has several objects. The saying "that the hen that lays is the hen that pays" is often heard. The majority engaged in the poultry business consider egg production the best end of the business. It is often the surest. There is not the same amount of risk attached to it. At the same time, if people are foolish enough to believe that Mr. Soand-So can supply eggs from hens, the front ranks of America's best tested by the so-called new system, breed of poultry. which have produced 300 eggs per annum, they have more faith in the advertiser and the hen than the wri-

Cowneas and Alfalfa.

My old friend, Colonel R. J. Redding, writes in the Atlanta Constitution very entertainingly about peas and alfalfa, and in a general way he seems to agree with me that the South needs peas and crimson clover worse than alfalfa in the present condition of the soils in the cotton belt.

Colonel Redding thinks that I claim too much credit for bringing the cowpea and its value more emphatically to the attention of the Southern farmers, and says that eighteen years ago he read a paper before the Georgia Agricultural Society at Augusta on the cowpea and its relation to Southern agriculture.

Well, Colonel, we will not dispute about this, for like Schley at Santiago there is glory enough for all, who work for the uplifting of the Southern farming. I was talking cowpeas, hatched early (and these can be writing cowpeas and growing cowpeas more than twenty years ago. It was then that I took up the cause of the cowpea in earnest, and have been giad they have the seconding of men like Colonel Redding, so that now the Southern farmers are waking up to the great value of the crop they had been neglecting or mere planting in a haphazard sort of Alfalfa seems especially adapted to the great Western plains, and cowpeas and crimson clover to the South, and it is far better for every section to devote more attention to the forage that is suited to its conditions than to try to grow those that demand other conditions. I would not discourage anyone from growing a piece of alfalfa, but in the general farming of the South I do not believe that it can ever take the place of the cowpea in summer and crimson clover in winter. It is a crop by itself rather than for an improving rotation in the ardson, of the United States Army, who is at the head of the Alaska road commission, contains a suggestion which, if properly carried out, may be of benefit.

The mining laws of the United States, and applicable to Alaska, require that when a mine is located on Government land, development work shall be performed to the extent of at least $100 per year until the patent be issued. This work is required as a demonstration of the continuous good faith of the locator, and to prevent the tying up of properties for an indefinite time.

Major Richardson's suggestion is that such development work be permitted to be done on roads leading to such mines at the option of the locator. In many instances the construction of a road to the property costs as much as opening the mine, and the road must be built before the mine can become operative. Besides, the development of the mine can be accomplished at a greatly lessened cost if there be a good road leading to the property.

In the transition from a prospect to mine a road necessarily plays an Important part. The carrying out of the suggestions of Major Richardson will require legislation by Congress. -Good Roads Magazine.
