Big Men.

We have of late been wondering if the attitude toward Christianity by the big men of our country is making any great impression on the minds of the average person? Well, it is making a lasting impression on the minds of thinking people, but those who think little, receive little impressions. What a powerful influence the President and his cabinet are now exerting over the world in a religious way! What a powerful sermon our President recently preached in a single word when asked to make a speech, he replied, "It is Sunday." That was all he said, and that was enough. But such things do not impress brainless people. The only hope of the country is the union of education and religion. Our institutions of learning are the hope of the country. 'T is a remarkable fact that comparatively few highly educated men are in our prisons, etc. And it is a rare thing to hear a highly educated person curse or swear. If we could just get people to think a little bit, there would be a big bit of good done. It is to many of us a surprise that people do not get sick and tired of sin; that they do not try to be high toned just for one week to see how it feels. B.
