Beautiful Tribute to Mrs. Day.

No death throughout the entire community could have come as a greater shock or caused more genuine heartfelt sorrow than that of Mrs. P. B. Day. Taken suddenly ill on Saturday afternoon, she never regained consciousness and in the calm of Sunday night her sweet spirit took its flight and returned to the God who gave it. No wonder that Trenton mourns to-day the loss of one whose place will be hard to fill. In all church work she was a tower of strength, faithfully discharging every trust imposed upon her. As wife and mother, she had no superior and few equals, her record is of the highest, noblest, tenderest. Her four noble moral are splendid examples of her teachings. By a peculiar charm of manners she won her way into the hearts of all who knew her. She loved everybody and everybody in turn loved her. She was warmhearted, sympathetic, charitable, in all things gentle and lovable. True to her convictions she never faltered when duty called her, and the love she so justly won and deserved in life was beautifully evidenced at her death by the large concourse of relatives and friends who attended her funeral and in the numerous floral designs that covered her grave.

If one branch of her work had pre-eminence over the other, it was that of the temperance cause. She was a devoted member of the W. C. T. U. and her heart wrapped up in her work with the L. T. L. of which she was leader. At one of the meetings recently she became somewhat discouraged, and when she mentioned this fact to one of the older boys who is just turning into young manhood, he said "Miss Annie if your little band realized what your teachings along this line have done for me and what that pledge I signed has meant when temptations encounter me, they would take more interest" and to the writer of these feeble words she said "that gave me renewed courage and I shall go on doing my best, for I feel that if I have saved one boy from the evil of drink I will not have lived in vain." Her love for little children was beautiful, thoughtful and tender and the outburst of grief among them was pathetic. They had heard her say that she wanted to die when the violets were in bloom and remembering this, each child in school carried a bunch of these her favorite flower and as the body of dear "Miss Annie (as she was affectionately and lovingly known)" was tenderly borne into the church by her own noble sons and her nephews, each child silently and tearfully placed his or her offering of love on the casket. The tribute paid her by her devoted rector, Rev. R. G. Shannonhouse was touchingly beautiful and full of pathos. His regrets were not for her, but for himself and for all of us who need her and those who sit in the dark shadow of sorrow. The memory of her beautiful character and loving kindness will be to her family and those who loved her a priceless recollection. Let us thank God for her precious life and may it be a guide post to others in their journey along life's pathway.

But the scent of the roses will hang around it still."

Building Pastures.

Mr. Henry McKie came up from his farm near Colliers last Thursday with two four-mule teams and purchased one and a half miles of woven wire from Messrs. Stewart & Kernaghan. Mr. McKie is one of the most progressive farmers in the county and it is his purpose to convert a considerable area of his large farm into pastures. Hundreds of others should go and do likewise.

Men!

If the men of Edgefield will meet me this Sunday in the Presbyterian church at 11:30 I will preach a sermon that will help you; and one that women and children can hear to advantage. Come, men, women and children.

A Sluggish Liver Needs Care

Someone has said that people with Chronic Liver Complaint should be shut up away from humanity, for they are pessimists and see through a "glass darkly." Why? Because mental states depend upon physical states. Billiousness, Headaches, Dizziness and Constipation disappear after using Dr. King's New Life Pills. 25c. at your Druggist.

Death of an Infant.

Death came and kissed away the life of little Louis Burnett last Thursday morning. Louis was the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. John Burnett. He was only six months old but was a sweet and lovely child. We join in with the whole community in sympathy for the bereaved ones.

It has been two weeks since we have had rain. The roads have dried off wonderfully. The log drag has been used in many places and has helped so much.

The farmers have lost no time in sowing oats.

Mr. Tom Wood sowed wheat last week.

We are sorry to report the severe illness of our friends, Messrs. H. H. Smith and George Mathis. Both are thought to be some better this morning. We hope and pray for their speedy recovery.

Living History.

A Boston University professor comes forward to recommend the reading of newspapers as part of the public school course. Isn't this rank heresy in the realm of education? It's easy to recall the time when any college professor who recommended the reading of newspapers for any purpose whatsoever would have lost caste. Newspapers were regarded by all high-brows as hopelessly vulgar, futile and trashy. Some of them, horrible to relate, were "yellow." Nearly all were beneath the dignity of a scholar, particularly the news columns. And as for putting such stuff into the hands of innocent school children—the very idea!

Maybe the newspapers have improved since that epoch; we hope they have. But certainly the educators have improved. And as they wake up to an interest in real life, and a perception of the fact that education is intended to fit children to live the same life, they develop appreciation of the wonderful advantages offered to every man, woman and child by the modern newspaper.

The teachers of the young used to act as if history were worthless until it had become fossilized in books. Now they recognize that we have here, in the news columns from day to day, history in the making which is vastly more interesting and perhaps vastly more important than any ever concocted from the bones of dead events.—Augusta Chronicle.

D. A. R. Celebrates Washington's Birthday.

The monthly meeting of the Daughters of the Revolution was held at the home of Mrs. Mamie Tillman on Tuesday afternoon. Being so near the birthday of George Washington, the occasion was treated with more than usual consideration, and the decorations were of the national colors, red, white and blue, with many of our country's flags lending to the scene an air of patriotism and loyalty.

The programs were very tastefully arranged with a picture in colors of a cherry tree and hatchet. The historical numbers were arranged by the historian, and carried out in detail. Selections had been assigned to Mrs. B. E. Nicholson, Mrs. A. A. Woodson and Mrs. J. L. Mims. These included a sketch of George Washington, "Reminiscences of George and Martha Washington" and the "Religious life of the father of our country." Music added greatly to the afternoon's entertainment. The vocal selections were greatly enjoyed and appreciated. Mrs. J. R. Tompkins and Miss Miriam Norris sang as a duet "O wert thou in the cauld blast." Mrs. Shannonhouse gave the vocal solo "Till the end of time," and Miss Elizabeth Rainsford, as part of the historical program sang, George Washington's birthday, accompanied by Miss Emily Tompkins. "The nightingale" was sung by Miss Miriam Norris, and an instrumental duet, "The march of the continentals" was rendered by Mrs. Tillman and Mrs. J. L. Mims.

As each guest arrived they were served to cherry punch, Misses Mary Lewis and Florence Mims serving, and then repaired to the reception room where the officers of the local chapter stood in the receiving line.

There were about twenty guests from the Johnston and Trenton chapters who were most graciously welcomed, and who aided greatly in the good cheer and successful development of the afternoon's pleasure.

Mrs. A. A. Woodson, regent of the chapter presided, and welcomed the visitors, and expressed appreciation to the hostess for her large share in this delightful occasion.

In the midst of the program a great sensation occurred, when it was announced that two distinguished guests had just arrived, the hostess in great haste proceeding to bring them in. Who should it be but George Washington himself and his beloved Martha, bringing with them a cherry tree which in cherry season would have been full of beautiful cherries, but out of season, so remarkable was the variety, heavily laden with bright red hatchets tied with blue and white. Of course each guest speedily seized one of them, especially when they found that they bore upon their blades messages from the father of their country enjoining the same honesty he practiced when he cut the cherry tree.

It was soon discovered however, that the two who bore the cherry tree were not George and Martha at all, but Hansford and Winks, who were as devoted during the afternoon as the real George and Martha were said to be.

Another sensation was the appearance of a young bride of 16 in the costume which she wore 160 years ago, a beautiful buff silk made entirely by hand. This was worn by Miss Gladys Chappell who told very sweetly something of the history of the dress.

At the close of the program an elaborate two course luncheon was served. The sweet course consisted of pink and white Charlotte Russe and miniature pound cakes bearing the auspicious 1732 and standing upon them a tiny silk flag waving as if to proclaim to the world the victorious life that had begun in 1732, and had culminated in such wonderful achievements, "And long may it wave O'er this land of the free, and Home of the brave."

But the costumes: It would never do to leave off a description of that most wonderful feature of the afternoon. There were among the forty guests present so many quaint and beautiful colonial gowns that we were loath to think that we were living in the 20th century. Most of them had gray hair, but they all from 20 years to forty, perhaps, looked to be "sweet sixteen." Each one hoped that the fashions of Geo. Washington's time would speedily return, if we could all look as stately and beautiful as we thought all the others looked.

Altogether we have never had a better time, nor realized so fully the value of the true patriotic spirit as we did on this occasion and we wish George Washington's birthday came twice a year. F. A. M.
