"UNCLE IV" WRITES.

Rev. George Bussey Preached Good Sermons. Delighted Georgia People. Corn Good Cotton Opening.

[Written for last week.]

I really am too sick to write, I haven't been well now for more than a month, I am trying the greatly advertised medicine, Tanlac, and should it do wonders for me and I get to be as large and saucy as Gus Edmunds or Trap McManus I will let you know.

I see in this week's issue of The Advertiser a card from Geo. Bussey telling of his being in a meeting at the church near me and of my not being able to attend but two days (which is true) but I see he is mistaken in the name of the Pastor, W. J. Howard: In all, twenty-two were added by reinstatement, experience and coming under watch care. Eighteen of the number by experience.

No, God willed that I should not go but I did not miss as much as anyone might suppose. The first day that I was kept away, a young man and a young woman drove up to my home, having heard that I was sick. They found me alone, sitting in my old rocking chair. I asked them in, got them a watermelon and for an hour we talked and I knew from their talk that Geo. Bussey was at his best. The next evening a man and his son-in-law came to see me and they too had the same good news, saying that they had never heard such sermons. On the last day two of my nearest neighbors came to see me, and one of them said, "well I have heard preaching all my life but never heard such sermons before," and also said that the Pastor told him and others that the two last sermons preached by George were the best sermons he ever heard. Now, all those parties who came to see me are members of my Bible class, and though I could not attend I had a feast at home.

And though two weeks have passed still the people are talking about the preacher and his short and forcible sermons. Well, I am satisfied. I just felt like if I could get George to come it would be a blessing and it has.

Let me tell an incident of the meeting that was told to me by a man day before yesterday. He said there was a man came from some distance on Friday the last day of the meeting and only heard the last sermon, and after the people were dismissed the man walked up to near the pulpit and asked if they were making up any money for the preacher and he was told they were and the man who was collecting was pointed out to him and he walked up to him and said, "Well, I like to hear a preacher that preaches like Mr. Bussey does. He just tells you what is so and what you must do and quits, and here is some money for him." That man was an unbeliever.

Well, I guess I have said enough about the meeting at present, but if I am living may have more to say after the 4th Sunday, the day set apart for Baptism.

Still raining? No, hav'nt had any now for several days except a light shower or two. And the days are getting right warm, but a little cool at night and 'til about 9 o'clock in the morning. Cotton badly damaged in this section. Am satisfied that 'tis off at least one-third if not half as most of the cotton is late plantings and could not be worked scarcely at all, but some are now plowing it. The corn crops are fairly good. Old cotton opening right along will have to begin picking pretty soon. The fields in many places are washed in gullies from knee to breast deep and in some few places cotton that was from half leg to knee high is about covered up where the sand drifted. I never witnessed such down pours of rain. Some of the fields where level looked like ponds of water after some of the down-pours. But with all that when we think of the thousands who have lost all their crops in Alabama, North and South Carolina and other parts of this State, I tell the people that instead of being blue and grumbling we ought to be thankful that it is no worse with us for we have something left while numbers have lost all.

P. S. I forget to tell you of a letter I got from one of Dandy's (Harrison Butler's) daughters a few days ago asking me to tell her something about her father as a soldier. I wrote her next day. I just tell you this to let you know that the old soldier's daughter's like to read incident of the war, especially when written by a comrade of their father. Harlem, Ga.
