

Office No 61
Residence, No. 17

Wednesday, July 27.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL

Miss Ellen Prescott of Greenwood is visiting Mr. and Mrs. L. T. May.

Miss Ruby Hill Devlin of Greenwood is the guest of Miss Mary Nicholson.

Miss Elizabeth Bussey of Augusta is the guest of her cousin, Miss Elizabeth Ransford.

Mrs. Hallie N. Greneker is spending some time at Lake Junaluska taking a special teacher training course.

Mr. W. A. Strom motored to the mountains Monday for a week's camp, being accompanied by his family.

Miss Ollie Atkinson of Richmond was a guest in the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Edmunds during the past week.

Mrs. Evan Cochran and her daughter, Miss Connie Cochran of Eustice, Ga., are guests in the home of Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Broadwater.

Mr. O. B. Anderson left this morning in his car for the mountains, being accompanied by Mrs. Anderson and their children.

Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Tompkins, Jr., of Columbia spent the week-end in Edgefield visiting Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Tompkins, Sr.

Miss Ruth Lyon is spending this week with her sister, Mrs. Donald Smith, and is serving as organist for the protracted meeting at Antioch.

The annual protracted meeting is being held at Antioch this week, the pastor, Rev. W. R. Barnes, being assisted by Rev. E. L. Kugley of Parksville.

Miss Elizabeth Johnson, the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Johnson, is spending this week in Columbia with her uncle, Mr. D. A. Johnson.

Mrs. L. W. Cheatham and her two little children returned Saturday from Baltimore, where they have been spending several months visiting relatives.

The Corner Store gives some prices this week that should be of special interest to the ladies. Bargains in many lines can always be had at this popular store.

Miss Elizabeth Fay returned to Beech Island today after a very pleasant visit to Miss Kellak Fair and Mrs. P. P. Blalock, Jr., having been the recipient of many social attentions.

Mr. J. C. Whatley, Mrs. Sallie Biggam and Miss Frances Biggam of Macon, Ga., are visiting relatives in Greenwood, Due West and other places. They were accompanied by Mr. Wright Holstein and his son, Max.

Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Holland of Greenwood are visiting Mrs. Holland's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Agner of the Red Oak Grove section. She came down to visit her aged grandfather, Mr. J. H. Coursey, who is quite sick at his home near Colliers.

Lieut. Pendleton Gaines and Mr. William Gaines spent the week-end in Edgefield as guests in the home of Mrs. L. H. Folk. Lieut. Gaines is in the aviation service where he has made a fine record. Mr. William Gaines has completed his third year at the University of South Carolina and will be in the senior class next session. Lieut. Gaines graduated in June. Both of these young gentlemen deserve the highest commendation for the splendid record they have made.

Little Miss Mildred Lyon, daughter of United States Marshall Lyon of Greenville, South Carolina is visiting Misses Mary and Martha Thurmond. The little hostesses gave a delightful rook party on last Friday afternoon in their guest's honor. Miss Kathryn Stewart won the head prize and little Miss Elizabeth Craig, of Anderson was given the booby. The honoree was presented with a dainty box of crepe-de-chine handkerchiefs as a souvenir of the happy occasion. A delicious sweet course was served at the conclusion of the merry games.

Mr. Rubenstein announces this week in his large advertisement that he has decided to continue his annual summer clearing sale until the 10th of August so as to give everybody an opportunity to share in the great bargains offered. He announces some special prices in his advertisement this week.

A Buncombe Bridge Luncheon.

Mrs. J. S. Byrd, who is always a delightful hostess, entertained on Saturday morning in honor of her house guest, Mrs. Bolling, of Columbia, and Misses Katherin Atkinson and Gertrude Dunbar of Beech Island who have been Miss Ida Folk's popular guests. After the games a delicious luncheon in two courses was served.

Body of Hezzie F. Griffis Brought From Overseas.

Several days ago Mr. J. J. Griffis received a telegram from New York announcing the arrival of the body of his son, the lamented Hezzie Griffis, from an American cemetery in France, stating also that it would be sent at once to him at Edgefield at the expense of the government. The body arrived Monday night, with Corporal James Watson of Camp Jackson as an escort. The massive casket was carried from the train to the residence of Mr. A. A. Edmunds, where it remained until Tuesday afternoon, when it was carried to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Griffis in the Hlgal-Berea section.

There were many depressing things connected with the World War but nothing struck a deeper or more depressing blow to the hearts of the Edgefield people than the announcement in the fall of 1918 that Hezzie Griffis had died in a hospital in France from the results of a wound received in battle.

Young Mr. Griffis, along with probably a dozen or more other Edgefield young men, went to Camp Jackson in November, 1917, for training and after being there several months was transferred to Camp Sevier. From this camp he was sent to New York to embark for overseas service in May, 1918. He was a member of Company E, 118th Infantry. His regiment landed in Liverpool and was transported across the English Channel to Calais, France. From Calais they were sent to Belgium and later into northern France for active service. The first engagement or actual battle in which Mr. Griffis took part was on September 29, when the far-famed Hindenburg line was broken by the American soldiers. After pressing forward, steadily driving the Germans back, they engaged in another fierce battle on October 6 and it was in this engagement that Mr. Griffis was wounded by having his left leg so terribly shattered that it had to be amputated above the knee. He lived until October 30, writing two very cheerful letters to his homefolk during the 24 days that elapsed between his injury in battle and his death. His body was interred in an American cemetery near the hospital in which he died. Mr. W. G. Byrd was comparatively near Mr. Griffis when he was wounded but did not know it at the time.

The funeral which will be in charge of the American Legion will be held at Berea church this afternoon, probably all who attend being in full uniform. The usual military salute will be fired over the grave. The United States flag which was draped about the casket will doubtless be preserved by the members of Mr. Griffis' family, this flag being always presented to the family of the departed soldier by the government. So far as we are informed, the body of Mr. Hezzie Griffis was the first body of the white men of Edgefield county who sacrificed their lives for their country to be brought here from overseas for re-interment, and The Advertiser would be pleased to see a suitable stone, one more imposing than is ordinarily found in Edgefield churchyards, erected to mark the grave and perpetuate the memory of this young man who freely gave his life to save the world from domination by the heartless Hun. Hezzie Griffis gave his life not only to protect his home and loved ones but for all of our homes and his memory shall always be enshrined in the hearts of our people.

FOR SALE: Farm 14 miles west of Edgefield, 65 acres open land, 50 acres in pasture and abundance of timber to keep up place. Six-room residence, good outbuildings and tenant ouses. Apply to J. C. HARRIS, Modoc, S. C., R. F. D. 1. 7-27-2tpd.

Miss Florence Mims Writes of the Redwood Trees and a visit to Muir Woods.

Dear Advertiser:

The state of California is so large, extending from Oregon on the north to Mexico on the south, that almost every physical formation is found within its boundaries, snow capped mountains, deserts, the most gigantic trees in the world, great grain fields and fruit orchards that can not be surpassed. A great part of the Pacific washes the shores of California.

No one thing has quite impressed me to the extent as have the redwood trees. They are older far than any living person, and taller than any other living tree. These trees were saplings when King Solomon's temple was being built. The first one I saw was in Portland, Oregon. It was proudly stamped as being a California redwood.

From seeing that one, I recognized the same trees along the way as we came down through northern California. Besides being tall and large, they are peculiarly good to look upon, having flaky bark that grows in strips down the length of the tree. The leaves are small and fern-shaped like the fir.

Some of the conspicuous things about these trees are that they are immune to all diseases common to trees and all attacks from insects.

The variety of redwood or Sequoia which grows near the coast has a miraculous capacity for growth from the trunk or from the root saplings. The wood is almost indestructible and will stand for an unlimited time without evidence of decay. The redwoods along the western shores of California rarely grow more than thirty miles from the ocean, because they are so dependent on the heavy fogs for moisture.

The government has preserved a great forest of these trees across the bay from San Francisco, known as the Muir Woods. Here they grow by hundreds, so tall that it seems their tips might be scorched by their very nearness to the sun.

There are endless thousands of them, with shady paths cut between the huge trunks. One peculiar natural arrangement is known as Cathedral Grove where several have grown around a vacant spot, to form a sort of arched aisle. Many weddings have taken place under this altar formed by nature.

Anything which is the best and most perfect of its kind is always of interest, and nothing more so than a magnificent tree that is at once sublime and beautiful.

To reach the Muir Woods we used four different modes of transportation. First, we ferried across the bay, and from there took an ordinary electric car to Mill Valley. There we boarded the most curious street car I had ever seen, a sort of skeleton affair pushed by a tiny engine that puffed much more than one pulling a number of large coaches. After climbing up and down hill, we were called upon to transfer to a still more unique means of transportation, a small car with no apparent means of locomotion. I looked for an engine to be attached to the back or front, but saw none. I thought there surely must be an engine somewhere of some kind, but we were told to get in Five long seats including the driver's, stood on the rails, and with a peculiarly bewildered feeling, I climbed in the last seat, and soon learned that the car was propelled by gravity, rolling down the rails around the incline of the mountain side, and the difficulty, after all, was not to make the car go, but to hold it back. We sped around sharp curves bordered by the great redwoods, and finally came into the very midst of them where the car abruptly stopped.

To me a grove of great trees is almost as sacred as a temple. I do not mean that profanely, but that such a forest would indeed be an appropriate place to worship, where God has so evidently worked to form these monuments to His own strength. To look upon these products of God's omnipotence gives one a proper sense of his own infinite littleness, discovering something so much bigger than himself that he can scarcely compass it with his eye, nor properly appreciate it without meditation. It is the tree that gives us habitations and the tree that makes a garden out of a desert.

One of the most beautiful poems I know, "Trees," has been written by a modern poet, Joyce Kilmer. Because it is so good, I shall pass it on to you:

"I think I shall never see
A poem as lovely as a tree—
A tree whose hanging mouth is pressed
Against the earth's sweet flowing breast:

A tree that looks on God all day,
And lifts her leafy arms to pray;
A tree that may in summer wear
A nest of robins in her hair;
Upon whose bosom snow has lain,
Who intimately lives with rain.

Poems are made by fools like me,
But only God can make a tree,"

Delightful Swimming Party.

Mrs. Allen T. Samuel entertained a number of her friends Friday afternoon at Smith's pond in compliment to her cousin, Mrs. T. L. Nicholson of Chicago. The time was passed very pleasantly in boating, swimming, diving and engaging in delightful social conversation on the banks of the pond. Although the water was somewhat chilled, yet everybody who took a plunge seemed to enjoy it to the fullest extent. The climax of the occasion was reached when all were invited to partake of a bountiful picnic dinner after they had grown weary of swimming and had again planted their feet on terra firma. The swimming party at Smith's pond will be a source of pleasant memories to all who were honored with invitations.

Little William Yonce Celebrates Sixth Birthday.

Little William Yonce entertained about fifty of his little friends charmingly on Monday afternoon, the affair being a celebration of the little host's sixth birthday.

The pretty Yonce home in Buncombe with its velvety green lawn was ideal for entertaining the happy children. A regular program was arranged for their entertainment. A peanut race resulted in little Martha Stewart winning an instructive Animal Book. In a peanut hunt Margaret Mooney won a very attractive Drawing Book. In the ball contest, Helen Dunovant was victorious, winning a novel horn.

On one end of the wide veranda was a fish-pond where each tot caught a cunning souvenir, whistles, ducks, and other prized toys.

As the shadows commenced to lengthen, the happy children were invited into the dining room where a lovely scene awaited their gaze. Four pink streamers were caught from the chandelier to the table, which was centered with a lovely arrangement of pink crepe myrtle blossoms. Comports of pink mints were reflected in the polished table. A sweet course was served, concluding the elaborate affair. Toy balloons were given each child as a parting souvenir.

The youthful host was showered with gifts from the little guests he entertained so charmingly.

Mr. C. W. Watson, who having just closed a successful season in the plant business, has just returned from Southern points, where he went in the interest of the business, and is now ready to offer plants for late summer and fall trade. He also visited a branch of the Clemson Experimental Station, which was very interesting to him.
