LOCAL AND PERSONAL

Miss Elizabeth Smith is spending this week in Columbia.

Dr. Luther Byrd of Augusta was among the visitors in Edgefield yesterday.

Mr. J. Sam Hughes went to Beaufort Monday where he has accepted a position.

Miss Ethel DeLoach returned Monday from a visit to her sister, Mrs. Frank Huggins, of Manning.

Miss Julia Folk, Mrs. P. M. Feltham and Master John Curran, Feltham spent Saturday in Batesburg.

Mr. C. E. Cogburn has rented the residence on Addison street formerly occupied by Mr. John Rainsford.

Mr. S. B. Mays, Jr., has arrived to remain at home after a prolonged sojourn in the Southwest and in Mexico.

The Masonic oyster supper which was announced last week for Friday night, November 4th, has been postponed.

Miss Margaret Madden and Miss Mattie Saunders spent last week in Columbia attending the state fair festivities.

The Edgefield Community Fair will be held in the Court House instead of in the Opera House Friday, November 4.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Rainsford went to Augusta yesterday and will also spend today in the city across the Savannah.

Mr. William Thurmond, Jr., and Mitchell Wells, Jr., came over from the South Carolina University for the week-end.

Mrs. Arthur Childress of Greer arrived Monday to spend this week with relatives in Edgefield. She has been very cordially greeted.

Mr. and Mrs. John M. Schroder and Mr. and Mrs. E. M. F. Schroder came up from Savannah and spent last week at Trenton and Parkhill.

A little daughter is now a permanent dweller in the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. McManus, Jr., bringing joy and gladness and sunshine into the home.

The Philharmonic Music Club will meet with Mrs. H. C. Mitchell Wednesday, November 9, at 4 p. m. A full attendance of the members is urged.

Don't hunt until the law permits and don't hunt without a hunter's license, and then do not hunt on the premises of another person without permission.

The Southern railroad has made reduced rates to the Augusta fair which is being held this week. A considerable number of our people will attend the fair.

The Edgefield friends of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Reel of Augusta waft affectionate greetings to their little daughter who was presented to them by the Stork Monday.

Mr. Morris Deal who joined the navy some time ago came home on a furlough of a few days last week. He is on duty at Charleston now but will go to Cuba about Christmas.

The Norris Millinery Company of Johnston announces in its advertisement in this issue that beginning with this week its entire stock of high-class millinery will go on sale at cost.

Mr. Abrom Daitch reminds the people this week that fall shopping will be made easy at his store because of the large assortment to select from and also on account of the very low prices.

Dr. C. A. Jones will preach in the Baptist church Sunday morning and evening. Favorable comment is yet heard upon the two very inspiring sermons which he preached here several weeks ago.

Mr. and Mrs. N. G. Evans will leave today for New York where they will remain for some time for treatment by specialists. Their Edgefield friends hope that they will soon return fully restored to health.

Only One "BROMO QUININE"
To get the genuine, call for full name, LAXATIVE BROMO QUININE. Look for signature of E. W. GROVE. Cures a Cold in One Day. Stops cough and headache, and works off cold. 2c

Judge J. B. Tompkins returned Sunday from the Confederate veterans' reunion in Chattanooga. He reports having had a fine time. A very enjoyable feature of his trip was the visit to the Chicamauga battle field.

The Collett Drug Company tells The Advertiser's readers this week of its large assortment of fine candies. Only in city stores, if there, will a larger assortment of fine candies be found than is on display in this popular store.

Rev. G. W. M. Taylor left yesterday for Lancaster to attend the annual session of the Upper South Carolina Conference of the Methodist church. We trust that he will be assigned to Edgefield and Trenton again by the bishop.

Rev. Ernest Baker who was recently called to the pastorate of the Presbyterian church will preach Sunday morning at 11.30 o'clock. His regular appointments here will be the first and third Sunday mornings at 11.30 and at night on the fourth Sunday.

The Ladies' Auxiliaries of the Methodist church will observe their annual week of prayer, beginning Monday, November 7, and continuing through Friday, November 11. The meetings will be held each afternoon at the church at four o'clock. The public is invited.

Monday and Tuesday a number of farmers were purchasing seed oats in Edgefield. This is well. If we are to overcome the boll weevil, it must be done by growing more food crops and small grain can be most successfully grown by sowing in the fall. The acreage of wheat and oats throughout the county should be doubled this fall.

The law regulating the killing of game is a good law and should be observed. A man who disregards the law is not as good citizen as he should be, and law-abiding citizens should co-operate with the game warden in enforcing the law. Then, too, every man who hunts beyond the borders of his own premises should have a hunter's license.

Mr. J. P. Sullivan presented The Advertiser with a very large sweet potato of the Porto Rica variety when he was in town Monday. He also presented Cashier Asbell of the Peoples Bank with one which weighed eleven and a half pounds, the largest potato we ever saw. Mr. Sullivan says he has harvested enough potatoes to supply his table two years.

Armistice Day to be Observed.

On Friday, November 11th, at the close of the week of prayer by the Methodist Mission society the Woman's Christian Temperance Union will observe Armistice Day, at which day all the mission societies are invited to be present.

The hour will be 3:30 o'clock p. m. A full program will be published next week.

The meeting will take place at the Methodist church.

The object of these meetings, being held all over the United States, is to pray for world disarmament. Let every woman come.

The Hub's Bargain Sale.

Comencing tomorrow, Thursday, November 3, The Hub, which is owned by Mr. Victor Daitch will begin a feast of bargains which are set forth in a double-page advertisement in this issue. Mr. Daitch has engaged Mr. R. E. Richards of New York to manage the sale for him. A perusal of this advertisement will show how very low the prices have been cut on staple merchandise. There are also many free offers which the people will be glad to accept. The first 100 persons who enter the store Thursday morning will be given $1 free on purchase of $2 and over. Mr. Richards will also be on hand to manage the sale in person.

In the drawing last Saturday the lucky number was 524 which was held by Major W. J. Duncan and he was presented with a Fisk inner tube free. Watch for the drawing next Saturday. It pays to trade with us.

Edgefield School News.

The Tillman Literary Society was organized at the beginning of school, and meets every Friday. The programs are well carried out, thus showing the wonderful talents of the Edgefield pupils. New officers were elected at the last meeting. They are as follows: Kate Mims, president; Robert Ouzts, vice-president; Allen Edwards, treasurer; Albert Rainsford, secretary; May Rives, censor, and Mr. W. O. Tatum, critic.

A match game of basket ball between the Edgefield High School and the Johnston High School Friday. Come and boost your school!

Our class was organized two weeks ago. Miss Eleanor Mims, president; Miss Kate Mims, vice-president; Mr. Robert Ouzts, treasurer, and Miss Elyse Huggins and Mr. Dixon Timmerman, reporters. Our class motto is "Be Square." Colors, old gold and black; flower, nasturtium.

A Test of Honor.

(A story written by one of the High School teachers. We leave the reader to guess who the hero and heroine are.)

Billy Marchant walked buoyantly up the wide stone steps of his sweetheart's home. He was happy, yet a close observer could easily discern an anxious look on his handsome face. Billy was soon in the drawing room before a roaring fire. In a few minutes Miss Terry came in and his troubles began.

"Bessie," said Billy, though his heart was beating furiously, "Bessie," you promised me an answer today, and I've come for it. Say you love me, say that you will be mine, sweetheart and—"

"Careful, Billy dear, careful," warned Miss Terry, "don't let your Southern inclinations lead you into a lifetime bargain. Hold one! Don't you dare."

"Billy," said Miss Terry, a few minutes later, when all was quiet again, "are you going to enlist?"

"I had a letter from Governor Smith today. He offered me a captain's commission in the Seventh regiment. Of course I'm going. But sweetheart—"

Bessie Terry arose from her chair and gazed down at Billy with a scornful stare.

"You are going to South Carolina? You are going to fight again, your flag? You are a rebel!"

"I was born and reared in South Carolina, you know," said Billy.

"Yes, I know. But you have been in the law here for four years. You are a New Yorker now, Billy."

Billy quietly shook his head. "I belong to the state of my birth. You wouldn't want me to be a traitor to my sovereign state, would you?"

"That's what you are, a traitor to your flag. Billy, I'll give you one chance. If you love me enlist in the New York Infantry. Father can give you a captain's commission. If you don't love me and value my love, go to your little South State and don't even come to tell me good-bye." With these words Bessie left the room.

Billy's mind was in a turmoil. Slowly he walked home, scarcely knowing where his footsteps led. He stalked up to his room, slammed the door, threw his coat and hat on the table, and sat down to think the matter over. In vain he wrestled with himself. But his love for the girl was an equal match for his sense of duty—his love for his native state—so the combat was fierce; for hours Billy sat perfectly quiet, while his brain raged.

"A girl that would put such a proposition to a man does not deserve—but oh! my! Bessie, how can I give you up? I love you! I love you!"

The next evening found Billy again in his sweetheart's drawing room. She suppressed a little sigh when she saw how haggard and worn he was, and her heart smote her.

"Billy, you have come to tell me." "That I will have to give you up, Bessie. I must go to my country. I leave tonight."

With a little cry Bessie threw herself into his arms, and he folded her to himself and kissed her.

"But—but, I don't understand," said poor Billy.

"Don't you see, darling! It was you! I was testing you, not your love for me. I knew you loved me, Billy. You are a man!"

Part II.

(Three years later.)

Bessie Terry came out of the library in tears. Her father's words were ringing in her ears. "No! You cannot even communicate with him. He's a rebel! He killed your brother at Gettysburg—my poor son. How can you even speak of him? I forbid you to have anything to do with him. The traitor!"

"But father," protested the girl,

"I love him. He's a gentleman. Also, father dear, I am twenty-two years old, and I have the right to speak for myself sometime."

"I forbid you to mention his name again. Go and pack your trunk. I will send you to Richmond, where your Aunt Myrtle can take care of you. She is not a traitor, if she does live in the rebel capital."

So a few days later found the little party passing through the Union lines. Rev. John Smith, Bessie Terry's brother-in-law, had gotten the passes, so that he could return to Richmond after a visit to his wife's brother.

At the Potomac the Union officer, detailed by Gen. McClellan to guide the party through the Union lines, departed and the carriage crossed over into Virginia—the rebel territory.

They had traveled scarcely three miles miles before they were surrounded by Union soldiers. "What have we here? Spies, by Jove," exclaimed the officer in command. "Pile out, you," this to the Rev. John Smith. Then seeing the ladies, "Oh, pardon, ladies, but you will have to do me the honor of returning to our side of the Potomac, and report to headquarters."

In vain the preacher protested. The carriage was turned back and with sorrowful hearts they began to retrace their steps.

Suddenly the officer who was riding by the side of the carriage began giving order in short, quick sentences. Then there was a sound of galloping horses, cursing men, and popping pistols.

"Charge," rang out an order, in a clear voice. Then bedlam broke loose. But it lasted only a few minutes. Soon the carriage was surrounded by grey-coated men. "Order, there!" The same ringing voice spoke out, and a young officer galloped up to the carriage in which the terrified young girl and no less terrified minister sat.

"Billy!" Bessie almost shrieked the glad words.

"Why, by all that is glorious!" and Captain Marchant jerked open the carriage door and clasped the trembling girl in his arms.

The officers began crowding around, and Captain Marchant came to earth again.

"Sweetheart, I thought I had lost you. You should have seen the letter I got from your father. But I love you, and your father and the whole Union army cannot get between us again. If we were only married!"

"Billy, Uncle John is a minister. Let's get married now."

"I thought, from my brother-in-law's description of you that you were an ogre. I find you are a gentleman, sir, and I'll be proud to marry you right now."

The Union officer, standing where the carriage had crossed the Potomac was startled a few moments later by thunderous cheers, mixed with rebel yells, which came from the rebel side.

But Captain Marchant and Mrs. Marchant were so happy that all the cheers, intended for them fell on deaf ears.

Meeting of Second Division of W. M. U.

On the 19th of November at Red Hill church there will be a meeting of the second division W. M. U., including the Missionary and Junior societies of the following churches: Antioch, Horn's Creek, Red Hill, Mt. Zion, Trenton, Hardy's and Republican. Each society is urged to be present.
