Welcome Service for the New Pastor Edgefield Baptist Church.

A Welcome Service in honor of Rev. A. T. Allen, the new pastor of the Edgefield Baptist church will be held Sunday Evening at 7:30 in the Baptist church. A program is being arranged for the occasion by the local pastors and committee from the several churches of the town. Mr. Allen has already begun his work in the new pastorate and has made a fine impression not only on his own congregation but in general upon our townspeople who have had the opportunity to meet him. We bespeak for him a successful pastorate in "Old Edgefield." Edgefield opens her door to him and with it a great opportunity for service in our common cause of religious uplift and civic righteousness.

COMMITTEE.

"High Finance."

Not in our twenty years of newspaper experience have we published an article which provoked as much comment as did the article by "High Finance" which appeared in The Advertiser last week. At least more inquiries and more comment, nine-tenths of which was favorable, reached us through various sources concerning the article than we recall ever to have heard before. It was well written, with a thread of irony running through it that most people discerned and were impressed by it, and it was written, too, at a time when the public mind felt the force of the statements, which though made in irony contained more than a modicum of real truth. It made a deep impression upon many readers, several representative farmers having stated that they were glad the article appeared in print at this time. Scores have been curious to know its author. Some placed it at the editor's door, others inquired if a Northern man wrote it and still others desired to know whether it was written by a Democrat or a Republican. The author, a true blue Democrat, was born, reared and still lives in Edgefield county and has the best interests of all the people at heart, particularly the farming interests. Possibly he will write other articles for publication. We hope so.

Mr. Reece Writes From Florida

Editor Edgefield Advertiser:

I received my first copy of The Advertiser yesterday and I certainly was glad to get it. It made me feel like I was up on the old hill reading it, but when I looked out of my window behold there was the Gulf of Mexico to be seen and not my hill and the little grand children that I have looked upon thousands of times in the past. A man can be 700 miles from home and reading his home paper makes him forget for the time being that he is so far away from loved ones.

Well, I don't know of anything special that will interest you people only to say the people here are too lazy to work. This country is very poor because the vegetation never dies it is so warm down here. I can show you a Castor bean that is ten years old and it is growing right on.

A great many people were at the meeting yesterday in their shirt sleeves. There is a good meeting being conducted here at the Southern Methodist church and in the park on Sunday afternoon. The Salvation Army is also doing a good work for this city.

I am still working every day but I don't know how long it will be before some Yank will say, "Well, I will have to lay you off for a few days so as to take care of some Yankee brother."

Well, I hope that if I ever get back to Edgefield there will be a great change in some things that were going on. The country people thought the boll weevil was a fraud, but ah, too late. Some people thought God had nothing to do with farms, merchants and banks. The people are now undoubtedly satisfied that some power has shown itself. The cotton question is off over there and it may prove a blessing. There are no hard times here because there are not ten acres of cotton in the county. Nobody is hard up here who is willing to work. He will live but it is the highest place to live in you ever saw. String beans are higher here than they are Edgefield. The beans here are shipped to Edgefield. They sell here for 15 and 20 cents per pound. Good luck to the Old Advertiser family.

Lott School News.

Our school is doing some fine work. The enrollment continues to increase and much interest is being manifested, not only by the teachers and pupils but throughout the neighborhood.

A part of last Wednesday was observed here as "clean up day." The removing of the shrubbery in front of the school building added much to the beauty of the school ground.

The second meeting of the Eumenean literary society was called to order by the president Wednesday afternoon, November 23, and the following program was rendered:

Scripture Reading, Quinton Ouzts.
Prayer, Martha Derrick.
Solo, Lucile Franklin.

Thanksgiving poem, Gertrude Pardue.

Our 1921 Thanksgiving, Lucy Holmes.

Solo, Martha Derrick.
Ancient and Modern Thanksgiving, Evelyn Salter.

Thanksgiving Proclamation, W. H. Pardue.

The First Thanksgiving, Olivia Pardue.

Song by society.
November, Marie Bryant.
School News, Frank Pardue.
Jokes, Jim Pardue.

Poem, Ruth Coursey.

It was decided to hold meetings on every Friday afternoon.

Our junior B. Y. P. U. of Philippi gave a fruit social for the grandparents of the union on November 24, from 2:30 to 4:30. It was an occasion of real pleasure to everyone present, young and old. As each guest arrived a card containing his or her "party" name was pinned on by the leader, Miss Lottie Derrick. They were called by these names throughout the party as follows:

Grandpa Good-Enough, Mr. Bud Rhoden; Grandpa Always-on-the-Job, Mr. Mahlon Clark; Grandma Particular, Mrs. Mahlon Clark; Grandma Smiles, Mrs. Frances Jackson; Grandma Never-Grow-Old, Mrs. Anna Derrick; Grandma Run-About, Mrs. Kirkland.

After singing Old Folks at Home, L. A. Claxton introduced the grandparents to the union in a very genia and gentlemanly manner. Then Martha Derrick recited a poem, "At Grandma's House." This was followed by a duet, "When You and I Were Young, Maggie," by Ruby Ripley and Brunson Derrick.

Recitation by Mildred Bruce.
Solo, Martha Derrick.

Then a spelling bee by the grandparents brought forth many shouts and yells from the juniors. A box of candy was offered to the one that spelled the longest. As a result Grandpa Always-on-the-Job, Grandma Particular and Grandma Smiles tied. They hurriedly divided the candy. Another prize was given to the grandparent that drew the best turkey. Grandpa Never-Grow-Old being the lucky one.

The leader assisted by the officers of the union served several kinds of fruits at the close of the party. The grandparents who were not able to attend were also remembered and fruit was sent to them.
