Mr. H. H. Sanders Gave Barbecue Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Sanders have made their value greatly felt in the Antioch community since they moved out there to make their home. They are both active in church work and are always ready to lend a helping hand in every undertaking for the community's benefit.

Mr. Sanders, superintendent of the Antioch day school and yesterday he gave a barbecue at his stately home for the benefit of the Sunday school, defraying all of the expense himself. Besides the members of the Sunday school, he invited some of his personal friends, including a number from Edgefield. Notwithstanding the lowering clouds and the early downpour of rain, more than 100 people gathered to enjoy the gracious hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. Sanders. Following his life-long policy, that of doing in the best possible manner whatever he undertakes, Mr. Sanders requested Mr. A. A. Edmunds to superintend the cooking of the "cue," which he did in a one-hundred-per-cent manner.

Sometime before noon the people began to assemble and the ladies were received in this ideal old Southern mansion by Mrs. Sanders and the men were welcomed by Mr. Sanders and seated under the trees out on the lawn. Mr. Sanders had provided a stand for the candidates to regale themselves upon and arranged seats for the audience. He "broke the ice" however for the speakers in a very appropriate welcome address, in which he urged all present to forget distressing events of 1920 and 1921 in order to grow long-faced, and enjoy themselves for a day. He said he wanted to see people laugh and be happy again. That this desire was what prompted him to provide this day of pleasure. He then took in his arms his beautiful little one-year-old daughter, which occasion celebrated her first birthday, and introduced her as the sweetest little baby in all the world, and everybody present heartily agreed with him. Mr. Sanders called "Uncle" Norman Youngblood, the faithful old colored man who was in his employment in Edgefield for about 15 years, and had him sing a religious song in his unique way, which was greatly enjoyed. As "Uncle" Norman mounted the platform, he said, as he turned to Mr. Sanders: "White folks, dis is my young Boss Man. I love him and always will." This brought forth hearty cheers from the audience.

Mr. Sanders next presented Rev. P. B. Lanham who spoke briefly and appropriately. He was followed by Hon. James O. Sheppard and in the midst of his speech rain fell so heavily that all had to rush to the house for shelter. After order was restored, Mr. Sheppard completed his speech standing upon the front porch. He was followed by Mr. C. T. Burnett, Mr. P. L. Cogburn, Mr. L. T. May, Mr. W. W. Fuller and Mr. S. McG. Simkins. Not a word of politics was uttered by anybody, be it said to their good sense.

Dinner was now announced. On account of the wet ground the ladies and children were served in the house and the men gathered about the long table under the large oaks. Barbecued meat and hash a la Edmunds was served in endless quantities. After the individual trays were filled, great dish pans piled high with meat and hash, together with pyramids of bread, were placed at intervals along the table. Great pains were taken to place one of the largest pans near George Swearingen and another nearly or quite as large close by Paul Cogburn. However, "Uncle" Charlie Key and Chesley Wells were their close seconds. Huge vessels of ice water were placed near by and were frequently visited.

Several hours after dinner were spent in delightful social intercourse, just what people greatly need now. A get together meeting is needed in every community, enabling people to have pleasant diversion and, as Mr. Sanders said, causing people to have confidence in each other restored. It was, viewed from every standpoint, an ideal occasion, given by ideal hosts at an ideal place. By the way, it is worth traveling many miles to see this stately old Southern home, which was erected 125 years ago but is as well preserved today as if it were only erected a decade ago. Of course, Mr. Sanders made many improvements upon it after purchasing it several years ago, including repainting inside and out. It is said that a former owner of this rare old home was offered $500 for one of the hand carved mantels which is a real work of art.

Edgefield people realized and appreciated the worth of Mr. and Mrs. Sanders when they lived here, giving them up with reluctance, and we are pleased to know that the good people of Antioch also appreciate their unselfishness and real worth to the community. Would that our town and county had more of their kind.

Large Still Destroyed.

Friday Sheriff W. R. Swearingen, accompanied by Mr. Wallace W. Wise and Mr. Warren Paul, destroyed a large still about 500 yards from the Plank road just below the farm of Mr. E. M. Padgett. It was a large steam outfit that had been in operation a short time before. Several hundred gallons of mash were destroyed. There was no one at the still at the time the raid was made. After destroying the still the raiding party learned that two negroes from that neighborhood had carried some whiskey to Johnston in an automobile Friday morning, so they left for Johnston. About midway between Trenton and Johnston they met the two negroes, Robert Gaines and Bill Terry, returning and upon searching their car found a quart and a half of liquor in fruit jars. They then went to Johnston and searched the place of William Bryant, another negro, finding something over a gallon of whiskey which was sold to him by the two negroes in custody. They were all three brought to jail but William Bryant was released on bond. The other two, Robert Gaines and Bill Terry, are now in jail awaiting trial.

CAN'T DO THE WORK.

It's too much to try to work every day against a constant, dull backache, or sudden darting pain in the small of the back. Be rid of it. Try Doan's Kidney Pills. Your neighbors recommend them.

J. C. Hughes, Engineer on S. R. R., Edgefield, says: "I used Doan's Kidney Pills several times and always found them good. My back gave me a great deal of bother. The jolting of the engine shook me up a great deal and this irritated my back and kidneys. It was hard to climb into my cab because of the stiffness in my back and sharp pains stabbed into my kidneys. I didn't rest well nights and was compelled to get up and walk around in order to relieve the pain across my back. My kidneys acted too freely but Doan's kidney Pills relieved the trouble. I am glad to recommend them."

Marriage of Miss Mattie Lyon and Mr. William Wingfield.

A beautiful home wedding was celebrated at noon Wednesday, June 28th at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Daniel Lyon, when their daughter, Miss Mattie Lyon became the wife of Mr. William Wingfield of Augusta. The occasion was a delightful one and a congenial company consisting of the family only and out of town guests filled the spacious home. The sons and daughters and grandchildren of Mr. and Mrs. Lyon were all present except one son who was unavoidably detained.

As the guests entered the door, their eyes met a most charming picture, and realized the touch of an artist in the lovely decorations. The hall and parlor were made into a bower of daisies and asparagus, and a table against the hall screen over which hung a basket of tulle and daisies, held the wedding presents, the gifts of friends and family. A bank of asparagus fern and daisies covered the space between screen and table and with the overhanging bell and the cut glass and silver, made a glistening picture.

One of the most inconspicuous looking gifts, but the most valuable, was a check for five hundred dollars from the groom's brother, Mr. Wingfield of Augusta.

The same design was carried out in the parlor, where a large and graceful wedding bell of tulle and daisies hung as a centerpiece, and high from the windows, and mantel were displayed groups of daisies on asparagus. Dainty baskets were seen occasionally filled with daisies and making one dream of shady dells and running brooks and green lanes and happy lovers. The arrangement of the decoration was planned by Miss Gladys Lyon.

As the strains of Lohengrin's Bridal Chorus was heard on the piano where Miss Ruth Lyon presided, the bride and groom unattended, came down the winding stairway, the bride bearing a magnificent bouquet of brides' roses and lilies of the valley. At the altar they were met by Rev. Mr. McFerren, pastor of the Green street Presbyterian church of Augusta, who performed the wedding ceremony. The bride was dressed in a most stylish travelling suit of blue and a becoming hat to match.

As soon as the marriage ceremony was over, the friends and relatives all gathered around and greeted the bride who has been known and loved in Edgefield since she was a girl at the S. C. C. I., and were introduced to the groom whom they all believed had won a sweet trophy in this splendid young lady.

As the minister began the ceremony which united the two lives, Miss Lois Mims on the violin with piano accompaniment by Miss Ruth Lyon, played "Traumerlei," that soft and enchanting selection which grows more beautiful each time it is heard, and especially under the artist touch of Miss Mims. After the ceremony, the whole orchestra, Mr. George F. Mims, Miss Lois Mims, Claude Lyon, Mrs. Walter Cantelou and Mrs. Leon Warren and Miss Ruth Lyon continued to play some of the most beautiful and appropriate selections, "A Perfect Day," "Tenderly," "Love's Old Sweet Song," and other charming melodies.

After music, block cream and pound cake were served, and the bride and groom left in a car for Trenton where they took the north-bound train for the North Carolina mountains. They will return to Augusta for a few months and will later build a home in North Augusta.

Mrs. Wingfield as Miss Mattie Lyon was well known to all Edgefield, and has been a teacher of ability for a number of years in South Carolina and other states. She is recognized as a young woman of high character and business ability as well. Mr. Wingfield is a member of the Wingfield Hardware Company of Augusta and is highly esteemed as a business man and good citizen of that city.

The following out-of-town guests were present:

Misses Annie and Patsy Lanham, Mrs. J. W. Harris and daughters, Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Lowrey, Mr. and Mrs. Golucke, Miss Wingfield, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Tennant, Dr. Tom Wright, Miss Shivers, Mrs. Isabel Jordan, Mr. and Mrs. McFerren of Green Street Presbyterian Church, Mr. and Mrs. Prescott Lyon, Mrs. Chesley Wells and daughters.

I respectfully announce that I am a candidate for re-election as magistrate of the 4th judicial district of Edgefield county and solicit the support of the people in said district, pledging myself to abide the result of the primary election.

Power of Sight in Animals.

The two familiar expressions, "An eagle's eye" and "Blind as a bat," just about sum up the average person's knowledge of the sense of sight in animals. The popular impression is that all large, dangerous animals of the jungle have powerful eyes; but, in fact, many are decidedly weak in sight.

The elephant has poor eyes, and relies on his other senses, mostly on smell, to compensate for this. Also the rhinoceros sees but a short distance, and depends on his sense of smell, and in charging an enemy. The buffalo has good eyes, but those of the bear are so poor that when a little confused he will run directly over the hunter he is trying to avoid. Bears' eyes are dramatically described as "red rimmed and savage," but bears, ordinarily, are not quarrelsome, and prefer to use their eyes in retreat.

Power of the eagle's eyes is proverbial, but the hawk's are nearly as remarkable. All birds that are speedy travelers have fine sight—a provision of nature to prevent their collision with other birds.

As thrushes, warblers, vireos, etc., see well, as is proved by their going to any place they choose. The fact that they often fly against lighthouses and are killed is no proof that they do not see, but indicates that the light confuses them, and as they near it, blinds them to the house itself. You and I can see an automobile several yards away, even on a dark night, but if the headlights are on and extremely bright, we may see only the light as the machine bears down on us. Moths fly into a candle flame because of confusion; their sight is strong enough to avoid the collision, but when the flame blinds them to everything else, they become pan-stricken and dash straight for it. Even game birds act as though blind; a covey of partridges, if flushed near the sea, will sometimes fly out and light on the waves. They can swim but little and are generally drowned by this act which ordinarily they would assiduously avoid. The gun's report excites them beyond self-control.

I think we would be safe in saying that on an average, birds see one hundred times better than man. By watching each other's actions birds will go a hundred miles to a carcass; and under favorable atmospheric conditions a bird can see a worm on freshly ploughed ground at a distance of three hundred feet.

The bee, though the strength of its sight is not remarkable, has a wonderful ocular equipment—five eyes, a cluster of three on top of its head, and one on each side. Zoologists say that the compound eye on top is so made as to be specially adapted for detecting moving objects; and this seems reasonable, as the bee has many enemies that fly above it.—Dearborn Independent.

Well, What Can We Expect?

The American flag still flies over booze, thanks to A. D. Lasker.

Mr. Lasker is an advertising agent who took the solemn oath to support the Constitution and laws of the United States and administer the office of Chairman of the Shipping Board.

Now he is engaged in the business of advertising in every port to which he can send an American passenger ship, that the United States permits its officials openly to flaunt its laws.

Liquor, all kinds of liquor, has been sold for months on the Shipping Board liners. Mr. Lasker by devious methods sought to prevent the subject from being discussed publicly. He failed. His defense, when the charge of impeachable violation of his oath of office was made, was the weakest imaginable. He fell back on the plea that the liners could not sustain foreign competition unless liquor was sold, and in addition the Supreme Court had not finally ruled that the Eighteenth Amendment to the Constitution was applicable to ships on the high seas.

Raw minds will formulate such excuses. The commercial side of prohibition with the question of its financial necessity to government and individual was argued for years while this country was for long years while this country was considering prohibition as a policy. The overwhelming sentiment which compelled the enactment of the prohibition amendment to the Constitution and the laws for its enforcement have settled that argument, and made it the fundamental law of this land that neither government nor individual shall profit from an outlaw industry.

As for the lack of a high court decision, that excuse is nonsense, and deserves a worse name. United States district courts have ruled the law applies to United States ships. The Department of justice under a former chief ruled likewise, and Mr. Lasker has sought no opinion from the present Attorney General to the contrary. He doubtless fears that Mr. Daugherty could only repeat the former opinion. It has been the acknowledged law of the nations since earliest times that a ship on the high seas is territory of the nation in which it is owned.

The United States has held itself out as a nation intent on abolishing the evils which flow with liquor. There are a very, very few, public officials who still express openly their opinion that the enactment of prohibition was a mistake and that the country should return to license. These few have the right to their opinion and the right to express it.

But Mr. Lasker's offense is different: He is the only official in public life who has dared openly to announce that he will not enforce the Constitution and the law of the land.—Dearborn Independent.
