

Citadel Moves to New Plant.

Charleston, Sept. 16.—The Citadel will open at its splendid new plant at Hampton Park September 20, when the older cadets will report for duty.

This opening marks a new era in the history of this famous institution. Founded in 1842, and modelled upon the military system in vogue at West Point, the institution has found through all its fruitful years, a high utility in its discipline as a training for citizenship no less than as a school of the soldier. The first period of its history was brought to a close in 1865, when the Federal forces occupied Charleston and the Confederate state fell. Of the graduates of this first period, the records show that 86 per cent were in the service of the Confederacy, and 43 gave their lives for the cause. The buildings were occupied by United States troops from 1865 until 1882, when Congress ordered the return of the property to the state, and it was reopened as a military college. The 40 years from 1842 to 1882 marks the first period of Citadel history.

Covers Equal Period.

By a striking coincidence, the second period covers exactly the same number of years—40—1882-1922. During this second period, the institution has grown in usefulness, influence and in numbers. It enlarged its borders at Marion square until finally it covered all the available property of the state—taking over the city guard house property in 1908, adding a fourth story to the main building in 1910 and building the Meeting street extension the next year. When the World War began, even these large facilities were entirely inadequate to accommodate the students who desired to combine military training with their academic studies. In these years 100 per cent of the graduates went into the armed forces of the United States and the first South Carolinian to fall in France was Lieut. John H. David, a graduate of the Citadel in the class of 1914. Of the 20 classes graduated in the years preceding the World War, 53 per cent were in the United States service. The actual number was about 325, of whom about 130 were in the American Expeditionary Force. Of these latter, six were killed in action and 16 others wounded.

The second 40 year period of the since which time the work of construction has gone forward continuously to the present time. Monday, September 18, the public will be invited to visit the plant and make an inspection of all the buildings and join in the house warming of the military college as it enters its new home.

Furman Has an Auspicious Opening.

Greenville, Sept. 16.—With an enrollment fully up to expectations, the 1922-23 session of Furman University got under way Thursday morning. With several students yet to be matriculated, it is believed that the attendance will finally come up to last year's figures, which were 416, the largest in the history of the institution. One gratifying feature of the enrollment is that a wider distribution of students over the state is shown. Every county except two—Beaufort and Lexington—is represented in the student body. Several states and one foreign country are also represented. The enrollment from North Carolina alone is more than a dozen.

Important announcements made at the opening exercises were that the James C. Furman Hall of Science, which was badly damaged by fire last July, will be ready for use by Christmas and that a portion of it will be in use within two weeks; that the new $80,000 gymnasium will be completed before Christmas; that the college opens for the first time this fall a modern, steam laundry for the use of the student body; a change in the management of the library; the addition of three new professors to the faculty; and the creating of two new courses and addition of other features in the college curriculum.

The new professors are: A. M. Arnett, Ph. D., Columbia University, head of the department of history; R. I. Allen, M. A., of the University of Georgia, assistant professor of physics; and John L. Plyler, alumnus of Furman and graduate of the Harvard Law School, who will be assistant in the department of law.

Succeeding Miss Alberta Malone as librarian is Miss Eva Wrigley, formerly librarian at Emory University. She will be assisted by Miss Lottie Clossland, of Lake City, a graduate of Coker College.

Sculptor Ready to Cut Into Stone Mountain, Ga.

Decatur, Ga., Gutzon Borglum, the American sculptor, soon will begin cutting a stupendous memorial to the Southern Confederacy in the solid granite side of Stone Mountain, near Atlanta, Ga.

The work, costing about 2 million dollars, will show the Confederate armies moving across the face of the mountain. Nearly a thousand figures will be cut into the stone, those of Lee, Jackson and other leading officers being more than fifty feet in height and in full relief. It will require about eight years to complete the work.

Pneumatic chisels will be used exclusively for carving the figures into the stone. An air compressor will be located on the summit of the mountain. The carving will be done from a car suspended from a steel cable and moved from place to place along the face of the mountain as the work progresses.

Cliff is 787 Feet High.

The perpendicular cliff upon which the figures will be cut is 787 feet in height. There is only one work of man higher than this, the Eiffel tower of France, which is 985 feet high, but compared with Stone Mountain is a mere needle, lacking both beauty and endurance. The largest of the pyramids is 451 feet in height and the Sphinx only sixty-five feet. The height of the Washington is 555 feet.

The frieze containing the figures will be nearly half a mile long and three hundred to four hundred feet above the ground. The larger figures will be in full relief—at places the stone will be cut to a depth of eight feet—and some of them more than fifty feet in height. Infantry, cavalry and artillery will be represented.

In preparation of this work all the available pictures of Confederate leaders were studied and no pains were spared in the effort to make the figures as true to life as possible. The features of Lee, Jackson, Johnson and some others may be recognized for a distance of two or three miles from the mountain, it is said.

An Army on the March.

The figures, when completed, will appear to be moving across the surface of the mountain rather than resting against its side. The effect under proper light and at the correct distance will be that of a great, gray

Greenwood Jury Finds One Guilty.

Greenwood, Sept. 17.—After deliberating 16 1-2 hours the jury in the case of R. Clayton Underwood and Berry B. Hughes, charged with the murder of Oscar Mitchell, Greenwood baseball player, reported to Judge H. F. Rice this morning at 10 o'clock that they had agreed on a verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree, with recommendation to mercy, in the case of Underwood, but they could not agree on Hughes.

Judge Rice then ordered a mistrial in Hughes' case.

In imposing the life sentence carried by the verdict, Judge Rice pronounced a warning against the influence of liquor. Underwood received the sentence without a tremor but his wife who had shown no emotion throughout the trial burst into tears.

A motion for a new trial was overruled by Judge Rice and he again refused to direct a verdict of not guilty for Hughes. Bail for Hughes was fixed at $5,000.

The life sentence for Underwood was the first sentence ever pronounced in this county on Sunday and one of the few on record in this state.

The trial of the two men consumed three days, during which time hundreds packed the court house to hear the trial of a case that had aroused intense feeling.

Oscar Mitchell, Greenwood second baseman, was shot to death by Underwood in front of Underwood's father's boarding house August 8. Underwood claimed that Mitchell had made an attack on his wife. The state introduced evidence to disprove the attack story.

"My trouble was brought on by being on my feet continually," says Mr. Paul. "I had a dull pain in my back and tired easily. My back was sore and stiff when I was on my feet long. My rest was often broken at night, my kidneys acted so freely. I procured Doan's Kidney Pills at Holstein's Drug Store and they cured me of the trouble." (Statement given occupation of its new plant at Hampton Park September 20. Visitors to Charleston who have inspected the plant, have expressed not only admiration but wonder at the size and equipment of the buildings and the beauty of the grounds, and say without hesitation that it is one of the most complete and attractive college plants in the South.

About three years ago, the movement for a greater Citadel was inaugurated by alumni and friends of the Citadel who approached the City Council of Charleston on the project, with the result that the City of Charleston offered the State of South Carolina the beautiful tract of land adjacent to Hampton Park, and lying on the banks of the Ashley river. This tract contains over 75 acres of highland and includes also a wide stretch of marshland of a hundred acres out to the river. There is a natural growth of fine old live oaks on the edge of the highland, and an avenue of well grown sycamore trees which were planted a number of years ago as a part of the park system. When it is considered that this tract is not remote from the city, nor even in the suburbs, but well within the corporate limits, it can readily be appreciated that its value may well approximate half a million dollars.

The legislature of 1920 accepted the offer of the City of Charleston and in that year and the following appropriated $300,000 and authorized a further loan of $500,000 for the purpose of erecting the necessary buildings.

The Board of Visitors promptly took measure to carry out the project. They engaged the firm of Lockwood, Greene & Company of Boston as engineers and architects, with whom was associated the eminent firm of Shattuck & Cooledge as consulting architects. The chairman of the board appointed a building committee consisting of three members, John P. Thomas of Charleston, chairman; Col. James G. Padgett of Walterboro and Col. James H. Hammond of Columbia. The firm of contractors was the Charleston Engineering and Contracting Company.

The corner stone of the Greater Citadel was laid with Masonic ceremonies on Thanksgiving day, 1920, headed a director of music. Mr. Judson Teague, an alumnus of Furman and a professional musician, will have charge if the training of the college glee club, band, orchestra and will give instruction in piano.

The freshman class is particularly pleasing to the university authorities, it being readily admitted that this is, on the whole, the finest set of men that has ever been matriculated at Furman. They are more mature than previous first year men, and the great majority of them are graduates of 11th grade and recognized preparatory schools.

"There is every indication," stated President McGlothlin, "that we are going to have a remarkably fine session at Furman this year."

Georgia's New Governor.

Cliff Walker, who last week defeated Hardwick in the race for Governor of Georgia, has already had quite an active career in public life, and his experience should be of great aid to him in administering the affairs of the Cracker State.

His first public office was in 1902, when he was elected mayor of his home town, Monroe. After serving in this office for three years, he was named solicitor general of the western circuit of the state, remaining three years in this capacity. In 1924, he was elected attorney general with a popular majority of 65,606 votes. He was defeated for governor in 1920 by Mr. Hardwick in the run-off primary between himself and the present governor.

We are told that Mr. Walker has not only taken an active part in political and civic activities of his state, but is a prominent Baptist layman and ardent religious worker. He has also been interested in a number of educational activities, having been named a trustee of Mercer university and of Shorter college, and has taken part in many educational movements.

During his career at the university Mr. Walker distinguished himself for his scholarship and for his literary and oratorical accomplishments. He won five medals through his ability as a writer, speaker and student.—Greenville News.

the United Daughters of the Confederacy for the storage of their documents and mementoes of the Civil War and as a meeting place.

Confederate Park is at the foot of the mountain, and will serve as an entrance to the memorial hall. Several hundred acres, most of them densely wooded have been set aside and are being parked for walks, drives, a small lake and other embellishments appropriate to the memorial.

An Addition to Southern Literature.

The literature of the South has had a valuable and interesting addition in the publication of "The Black Border," by Ambrose E. Gonzales, of Columbia. The book is a collection of gullah stories, which delineate admirably and truthfully the coast country negro, his dialect, his character and the rich humor of his legends and beliefs.

A number of these stories were published by Mr. Gonzales in The (Columbia) State, of which newspaper he is the head; others were added in the volume which has just appeared. The title of the column is made clear by an outline map of South Carolina, showing a heavy black border running from the Savannah river past Beaufort and Charleston to Georgetown, the home of the "gullah" negro.

The book we believe, will be found to have a value beyond its literary and historical interest. Those who are interested in tracing the relationship of the human races back beyond the period where written history begins, will doubtless find in these legends and beliefs of the coast negro, a common ground of connection with the ancient history of other tribes of the world, as was the case in that other celebrated Southern book, "Uncle Remus," by Joel Chandler Harris. The origin of the negro race is shrouded in mystery, and their traditions of the present day in many cases, have been found to date back many centuries to the childhood days of the race.—Greenville News.
