Address of the Advisory Committee.

In accordance with the instructions of the Democratic Conference which met in Columbia on July 10th, the following address has been issued by the advisory committee: To the Democracy of South Carolina.

All white Carolinians worthy of the name they bear, and entitled to share in the traditions of the past, the prosperity of the present and the hope of the future, are we Democrats, to such, and only such, we earnestly and confidently appeal.

All that we have and are, all that we hope for and desire to transmit to our children, depends upon the continuance of white supremacy in this State; and this supremacy upon our united devotion and loyalty to Democratic principles, unity, harmony and organization within party lines, obedience to the rules and faith in the justice and success of Democratic aims, purposes and methods.

To each succeeding generation of our race is entrusted the ark of civilization, and upon each devolves the sacred duty of defending, preserving and transmitting our racial heritage of civil and religious liberty, the fruits of labor and of thought, the garnered stores of material and intellectual wealth—all that is good of what our race has won and held by hand or brain, by valor, industry or wisdom, throughout the ages.

This generation of Carolina Democrats equal to the trust? Judging the future by the past, we unhesitatingly answer, yes. It is, however, true that "eternal vigilance is the price of liberty," and the least vigilance must now pervade over us. A grave danger is impending over us.

At a time when our State is prospering, and day by day becoming more and more a large number of its opponents, while acquiescing in such a result on grounds of party fealty and political expediency, cannot be induced to give to him that active support which alone will insure the election of the Democratic nominees in case the Republican party puts a ticket in the field.

In the eyes of all true Democrats the maintenance of white supremacy in the State and the preservation of the blessings of that supremacy is the only guarantee, and therefore the only consideration, superior to the aspirations of any individual. The free and untrammeled expression of the popular will within the lines of the party organization will constitute an authoritative declaration which must command ready and since 1876. For his own selfish purposes, the farmers have been taught that to criticize Tillman is to abuse the Farmers' Movement, that to oppose his methods or nomination is to oppose the farmers themselves, and that to declare him unworthy of support is to say that the farmers have no right to meddle in politics or to suggest either men or measures to the party. We beg our brother Democrats to disabuse their minds of all such ideas and to listen to us as friends who are equally interested with them in the true welfare of the State. Not one farmer in ten believes the charges made in this campaign against the Democratic party or its officials.

Every fair-minded advocate of the Farmers' Movement sincerely regrets that such charges have been made and rejoices that they have not been sustained. A majority of the Democrats who are embraced in this movement have just begun to realize the strength of organization and to recognize the fact that in their hands rests the political power of the State under Democratic control. We believe that they endorse neither Tillman nor his statements or methods as such, but that their sole desire is to promote the success of their own movement.

This brings us to common ground. A majority of the farmers in the movement are not so much for Tillman as for the success of the movement; the great majority of other Democrats do not object to the movement, but do object to Tillman. We all agree that within Democratic lines the farmers of the State have a decided and available majority, and can, with the assistance of their Democratic brethren of other vocations, so control the policy of the party as to secure to all classes their proper share of influence in the administration of the government.

The attainment of this result requires the free and cordial cooperation of all elements of the Democratic Party. To secure such cooperation it is essential that the nominee of the party for the high office of Governor should be a man who has been in the front of the struggle for the people, and whose fair fame, slandered her official record, distorted her history, outraged her dignity, betrayed her confidence, and whose supporters and endangers the integrity of the Democratic party by sowing the seeds of dissent among its members; and there are grounds for apprehension that an event of a refusal by the August Convention to order a primary election, and of the nomination of B. E. Tillman by the September Convention, a large number of his opponents, while acquiescing in such a result on grounds of party fealty and political expediency, cannot be induced to give to him that active support which alone will insure the election of the Democratic nominees in case the Republican party puts a ticket in the field.
