THE LOVE OF MONEY.

at the country house a little barefoot, ragged urchin came up to where he was lying, accompanied by a grandmother. The little fellow looked wistfully up at the great physician, while the grandmother explained: "I could not keep him away, doctor He heard that you was here; that you was the greatest doctor in the world. He said that you could cure him and make him like other boys. I told him that he had no money and that he could not come; that you would not be bothered with him. He said he knowed you could cure him, and he would come. So here he is sir."

The doctor, moved by his simple faith, by his helplessness, by his poverty and rags, hastened to prescribe for him. He gave him two weeks of personal attention, and at the end of that time he was romping in the fields strong and well with the other boys. Thanksgiving day the doctor received by express a rude box, and when opened found in it a large turkey, on one leg of which was tied a card on which was scrawled: "Dear Doctor-Here is a big, fat turkey for you. It's the best that I could send, but I know he is young and tender, for I raised him from the egg my self." Signed by the boy's name. The doctor treasures this gift above all the gifts from millionaires, above all the treasures of money ever re ceived. Life does not consist in the abundance of things which a man may possess.

Sixth-It is this passion for money in itself and money at all hazzards and money quickly that brutalizes the human. For if man trades in the lifeblood of his fellow man. It is the most brutal war that earth ever saw. Martial war is brutal enough. It is a horrible thing to butcher men with swords and bayonets and guns and cannons, but it is more inexpressably brutal to butcher men and women commercially and cast them into to the pit of hunger and want and starvation and despair. It is kind to kill one quickly. It is brutal to kill them by a lingering

If a man wrecks a train, they offer a premiun for his life. We say that lynching is too good for the man who would wreck an express train loaded with men, women and children. But in this war for money men sneak into the Stock Exchange, and with a lie and a trick and a subterfuge, wreck a whole railroad corporation from end to end of the line, destroy a thousand homes, drag down into the ditch, into the pit, unto the grave of a lingering death, thousands of and he crowned, forsooth, as a modern Na poleon of finance instead of being hung to the nearest limb. MARTIAL WAR. In martial war soldiers are kind to one another, even to enemies. There was a picture on exhibition in the National Academy of Design last year which represented a scene on the field of battle between the northern and southern armies. The Confederate soldier in his gray uniform lay wounded nigh unto death with his broken arm folded under his body and the broken leg that made it impossible for him to move. He was crying for water. Near by was a wounded Federal soldies in blue uniform. He was stricken to the earth with a terrible wound, but he was crawling over the rough ground extending his canteen in his strong arm as far as possible toward his wounded enemy. A little child wandered between the two lines of battle in the late war. Instantly both lines ceased firing at the sight of that little bit of white clothing. Two men stepped forward from either of the ranks and seized the little one and led the child back to the mother in her cottage. And after the child was safe they returned to their ranks, and again the awful volleys of lead began their deadly

In martial war men do not kill women and children. They do kill a wounded enemy. Even a Turk will not fire on a hospital. But in this modern war for money maniacs fight. Madmen do battle. They kill women and children without mercy, and a wounded friend is the supreme opportunity of the crisis of battle. They spring on his body and tear him limb from limb. Such a life is the abrogation of civilization, the denial of love, the denial of the basis of Christianty itself. No Christian civilization can exist while these forces are dominant.

John Doe and Richard Roe.

Some time ago John Doe had $400 in a savings fund. Becoming alarmed at the financial depression he withdrew his money and now has it in

Some time ago Richard Roe had $15,000 in bank. Becoming alarmed he withdrew the currency and hir a vault in the rear of the the money lies there today

John Doe and Richard Roe congratulate themselves that they are pretty smart-that they know a thing or two more than their fellows -and they are not slow to insinuate the same by sundry sly looks and mysterious expressions. At least they are safe from the storm. John Doe and Richard Roe are fools. Money is not made to be hoarded. There is only $23.50 per head of the population and every person who hoards more than that robs the public of that much of its share. Take care of your property and get all you can honestly, but don't hoard money. There is barely enough

Suppose there was a bread famire pecause a certain number of John Does and Richard Roes had bought up more than they could eat and stored away. Suppose there was available only an average of twentyfour loaves apiece, which was just enough if each got his quota, and that John Doe had secreted 400 loaves in his cellar and Richard Roe had locked 15,300 in his warehouse, would not public indignation be kindled against them? Neither money nor bread is of any value until used and no man has moral right to place either beyond the reach of those who need them and are willing to give compensation

Of course a man should be cautious and husband his resources. But the man who thinks the proper way is to put his curre ey in a stocking or a vault is a fool and a public enemy.

If there were a few more thousand John Does and Richard Roes, the nation would quickly go on the rocks. Currency is the life blood of trade. The man who hoards it is a business

Don't be fools. Don't wreck this country. Take your money and put it in the bank, for if our banks all fail every other business will fail also and we will be in a maelstrom of Portfolio of the World's Columbian bank-ruptcy.

Feed the Hogs.

Now is the time to push the fattening of hogs. They are young and growing, and should be so fed as to keep them growing, but not too fast. For this purpose green corn stalks and ears are very good. Feed as much as they will eat clean, and this will keep them growing rapidly until harvest, when you can begin to feed corn to fatten them. We do not agree with most of our farmers that fattening hogs should be confined in a close pen to prevent them from tak ing exercise. They should have a cool place with running water and plenty of shade, and if fed properly, they will not take too much exercise, and will fatten as fast as when confined in a close pen, and they will be cleaner and healthier. Any hogs of a white breed are easily affected by the sun, and should be protected, or they will not thrive.

This admirable preparation so sucessfully used for many years has be come a necessity to that classs of pa tients requiring a mild but efficient tonic, combining the virtues of fresh beef, a sound quality of wine and a salt of iron, which strengthens but does not constipate.
