WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 24, 1897. A GREATER MISTAKE.

The Greenville News, in comment ing upon our remarks in reference to our remarks about the new street railway which is now in course of construction in Charleston, is led into several errors.

In the first place this is not "thoughtless South Carolina newspaper." The utterances which the News criticises were our honest opinion based on observation and experience. Charleston has for years, and is even now, operating her street railways by horse power. Many of her more progressive sisters have long since abandoned the horse and substituted electric power, and in following the lead of other cities, we but expressed our gratification that Charleston had at last awakened to the necessity for more rapid means of transit between her business and resident portions than the horse car.

Of all the papers in the State, out side of Charleston, this paper has had the least to say detrimental to the interest of the grand old city by the sea. We love the memories which cluster around her name like a halo of glory; we cherish the glorious record she has indelibly stamped upon the pages our of history as a nation and a State; we revere the bravery, the patriotism and devotion of her sons; we appreciate the sufferings which she has undergone and the sacrifices which her people have made to keep hostile invaders from our borders and to rescue the Palmetto State from the iron heels of a merciless band of robbers, who, hid beneath the name of government, plundered the State of her fair name and her resources. All these things we gratefully remember and have time and again showed our appreciation in a practical and substantial way. When she was taken from this District and put in the Black Congressional District, although politically opposed to a majority of her people and condemned her methods to control the nomination of the Representative, we hastened to her defense and did all in our power to prevent the consumation of this po lical measure, going so far as to claim that the business and commercial interests of Charleston were so different from those of the inland counties, and should, therefore, have a representative in Congress alive to the demands of her interests and in sympathy with her business men. We have nothing but the most kindly feeling for Charleston, but we are compelled to say, after mature considertion, that in allowing Columbia, for instance, with not one half her population, to lead her six or seven years in the use of electric street railways, she must certainly have been in a Rip Van Winkle sleep

In another column will be found an article from Capt. J. H. Counts urging the necessity of a road convention to discuss the best and cheapest means to have good roads leading to this place. This is an important matter and one that should receive the most careful and thoughtful consideration of not only every farmer in the county but also the merchants of this town. There is no question about good roads being conducive to the business prosperity of a country, and it should be the honest effort of all our people to so repair and build roads that will be easy of travel and a convenience to our farming friends. We are satisfied that this can be accomplished by an united action on the part of our people.

for that length of time, and the construction of the road now is evidence that she is awakening, for which we are thankful.

In this connection we would suggest that the County Supervisor, the County Board of Commissioners, the township boards, the tax payers generally and the business men of the place meet in convention and discuss this matter, together with the advisability of freeing two ferries on Saluda for the accommodation and convenience of the citizens of the Fork who are compelled to come to the court house to transact legal and other business. A good plan, in our opinion, is to buy or lease two of the most convenient ferries and make them free. The people of the Fork are certainly entitled to this much at the hands of the county to which they pay a goodly share of its taxes and in asking this they are not expecting too much.

If our preference were consulted we would say build a free bridge over Saluda, but as this is rather expensive, and times are hard, we will be contented for the present by freeing the two ferries mentioned above.

The colored people of the State are making commendable efforts to organize a society for the purpose holding annual fairs at which the improvements of the negro in the sciences of agriculture, mechanics and art can be exhibited.

That part of the grand jury's report which refers to the bad condition of some of the public roads in the county, is timely and should meet with the hearty approval of all the people. The Supervisor is exhausting all the means at his command and is bending every energy to put the roads in thorough repair, but without the hearty co-operation of the overseers and road hands his efforts will be greatly encumbered and the good results considerably curhands are busy trying to make one lick tell for two The only ray of hope that we can see in the election of Mr. McKinley to the Presidency in regard to the business interest of the country is a revision of the tariff so as to give ample protection to American industries. This, in our humble judgment, will restore confidence, start the wheels of many factories and other industries which are now idle and give employment to thousands of unemployed laborers. A protective tariff will not only accomplish all this but at the sometime do away with the necessity of issuing interest

The members of the Legislature went to Charleston Thursday to witness the manoeuvers of the North Atlantic squadron off the bar of that | mont of estates of testators. ort. They were hospitably treated by the good people of that city and had a dilightful excursion around the harbor. The only disappointment was that the fog was so heavy that many of the larger ships of Uncle Sam's navy could not be seen.

Your Present Need

Is pure, rich blood, and a strong and healthy body, because with the approach of spring and the beginning of warmer weather your physicial system will undergo radical changes. All the impurities which have accumulated during colder weather must now be expelled or serious consequence will result. The one true blood purifier prominently in the public eye today is Hood's Sarsaparilla. Its record of cures is unequalled. Its sales are the largest in the world. A few bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla will prepare you for spring by purifying and enriching your blood and toning and invigorating your whole system.
