Writes the Aalanta Journal from Rock Hill, among other things: "They manufacture everything they use except the wheels and dash boards. They build the best buggy that was ever built for the price."

In looking over this enterprise one is charmed with the system and thoroughness of the whole business. To every man his work and to everything its place. An old eight day clock sitting on the mattle piece does not run more regularly from the great main spring that this business moves.

"In going over the various apartments of the shop one is impressed with the skill and fidelity and the thoroughness of each department. Nothing is half done, but everyting thoroughly done. Such an enterprise as this in a community in the South is a breakwater to Yankee Doodle. Yankee genius and thrift and economy have never done better and cheaper than this.
