School Management.

Billy Felix on Training of Boys and Girls in the Common Schools.
To the Editor of the Dispatch:

"One of the first essentials of success in any enterprise or business is a right beginning. 'All's well that ends well.' If we start right, continue right we will end right. A child should begin the first year of its school life right in order that he make a success of the succeeding years and get the best possible results. Then one of the first things that should be impressed upon his mind is the great importance of making use of the time he has of gaining knowledge and not waste the precious moments in idleness.

Today we find all over this beloved Southland of ours, a great number of school houses with an innumerable number of bright boys and intelligent girls seeking wisdom. They go to school to obtain the knowledge which in a few years is to give them power to fight the battle of life successfully. They should be impressed with the thought that soon they are to enter out of the active duties of life and make use of the time they have in the school room in storing their minds with such knowledge that will enable them to discharge that duty to the good of man and the glory of God.

We find in all our schools, yea, even in the same family, children of different temperaments, hence they require different methods to produce the same results. We find in all schools the so called "dunce," the genius and those of average powers, and no one exactly like any one else, hence the teacher to make it a success and bring about the best possible results, must study the pupils individually.

Education comes from the Latin words "e" out of, "duco" to draw or lead, hence as an educator, the teacher is to draw out the latent powers of each child in order that they may be fully developed, and the teacher who knows best how to stimulate and direct these powers is the one who will be most successful.

In our schools we have children with all kinds of mental inclinations. There is the artistic student who displays a talent for drawing all kinds of strange and mysterious hieroglyphics which he takes a great delight to display before the other students, especially if it be the portrait of his present preceptor. Many a teacher chide and scold instead of encouraging and aiding the little fellow to develop the art. By so doing you not only keep the little fellow busy and interested in his work but you may be the means of making an artist of whom the world might be proud. Another shows a fondness for mathematics, and another for history, geography, etc. Let them pursue their favorite studies, but not, however, to the exclusion of all others, and the one may become a great financier while the other may become an other Livingstone or Stanley, or perhaps President of these United States.

But the difficult part of my subject has not yet been reached and that is, those who seemingly care for nothing. They will neither study what is assigned them and not much of anything else. Here comes the trying part of the teacher's work. He is to exhaust all his skill to awaken in the seemingly dull student an anxious desire for study and knowledge. They should be commended and encouraged when they make an effort and should not be scolded and discouraged. There are times when scolding do more harm than good. He is a wise teacher and likely to be the most success who can exercise patience and forbearance under such trying times. Perhaps they have done their best, and if so, how could they have done better? A kind word costs but little, yet its influence may last a life time.

"We can make a school room cheerful, If with kind words we begin, We can make the children happy, And their truest blessings win."

So it is kindness and love that make friends everywhere. They not only aid in winning the children, but by continual practice they will gain a patience never to be obtained in any other way and if there is any one who should exercise patience it is the teacher. True, the teacher should not be trifling and too lenient neither domineering and tyrannical, but mild, firm and commanding. Show the child that you care for him, that you love him, that you take an active interest in all that he does; that his success gladdens while his failure grieves, and I'll assure you that the child will love, honor and respect you, and do his best to learn.

The barefoot boys and school girls of today are to be the men and women of the morrow. The future destiny of our country depends on them. What manner of men and women will they be? Fellow teacher, we have it in our power to a certain extent, to say what manner of men and women they are to be.

Education is a better safeguard for the perpetuity of a nation than a standing army. What power bidden in the common schools of our country if the teachers will only direct it into the proper channels. May all the teachers of our schools and colleges direct the minds of those under their care so as to be able to prove a benefit to their fellow man, a blessing to their country, an honor to their State and glorify their God.
Billy Felix.

The Greatest Discovery Yet.

W. M. Reppine, editor Tiskilwa, Ill., "Chief," says: "We won't keep house without Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. Experimented with many others, but never got the true remedy until we used Dr. King's New Discovery. No other remedy can take its place in our home, as in it we have a certain and sure cure for Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, etc." It is idle to experiment with other remedies, even if they are urged on you as just as good as Dr. King's New Discovery. They are not as good, because this remedy has a record of cures and besides is guaranteed. It never fails to satisfy. Trial bottles at J. E. Kaufmann's.

Did You Ever Think?

That a kind word put out at interest brings back an enormous percentage of love and appreciation?
That, though a loving thought may not seem to be appreciated, it has yet made you better and braver because of it?
That the little acts of kindness and thoughtfulness, day by day, are really greater than one immense act of goodness once a year?
That to be always polite to the people at home is not only more lady like, but more refined, than having "company manners"?
That to judge anybody by his person appearance stamps you as not only ignorant, but vulgar?
That to talk and talk and talk about yourself and your belongings is very tiresome for the people who listen?

The Cause of Dyspepsia.

The most common of all human ailments is deranged digestion; the most aggravating disease, inherited by man, dyspepsia.

The primary cause of dyspepsia is lack of vitality; the absence of nerve force; the loss of the life-sustaining elements of the blood.
No organ can properly perform its function when the source of nutriment fails. When the stomach is robbed of the nourishment demanded by nature, assimilation ceases, unnatural gases are generated; the entire system responds to the discord.

A practical illustration of the symptoms and torture of dyspepsia is furnished by the case of Joseph T. Vandyke, 410 Hickory St., Scranton, Pa.

In telling his story, Mr. Vandyke says:

"Five years ago I was afflicted with a trouble of the stomach, which was very aggravating. I had no appetite, could not enjoy myself at any time, and especially was the trouble severe when I awoke in the morning. I did not know what the ailment was, but it became steadily worse and I was in constant misery."

"I called in my family physician, and he diagnosed the case as catarrh of the stomach. He prescribed for me and I had his prescription filled. I took nearly all of the medicine, but still the trouble became worse, and I felt that my condition was hopeless. I tried several remedies recommended by my friends but without benefit. After I had been suffering several months, Thomas Campbell, also a resident of this city, urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People.

"He finally persuaded me to buy a box and I began to use the pills according to directions. Before I had taken the second box I began to feel relieved, and after taking a few more boxes I considered myself restored to health. The pills gave me new life strength, ambition and happiness."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure dyspepsia by restoring to the blood the requisite constituents of life, by renewing the nerve force and enabling the stomach to promptly and properly assimilate the food. These pills are a specific for all diseases having their origin in impoverished blood or disordered nerves. They contain every element requisite to general nutrition, to restore strength to the weak, good health to the ailing.

Face the Facts.

Greenville News.
What will it cost you to live and support your family during the year 1898? How much money can you make and how much will you have to spend? How much do you expect to save? If you are a farmer and must borrow, how much will you borrow? How much can you afford to spend and still be able to pay your debts next November, supposing that the price of cotton is five cents a pound and you make the same crop that you made last year? Are these questions that you have asked yourself?

There are two ways "of doing business." One is to take no thought of the morrow. If your little boy wishes a shot gun and you have ten dollars in your pocket, you can buy it. Then you can buy a barrel of flour on a credit. If your daughter asks for a new dress, and you can borrow the money, you can give it to her though she could perhaps get along without it. If you see a buggy in town that "takes your eye" you can buy it and, comforting yourself with the vague thought, "The money will come from somewhere," you may go your way faintly rejoicing. Meanwhile you do not know how much money you are actually spending. If the purchases were itemized and added up the aggregate would astonish you and you would hesitate to believe what the figures told you. You have drifted along, indulging your wants as they rose and have shut your eyes to settlement day—fancying that by some supreme effort or by some good luck the nature of which you do not dare not attempt to foretell, you will "come out all right."

This is the way of doing business that forces a man to mortgage his property at the end of the year, that makes him morose and sour and unhappy and dissatisfied and that brings him to ruin and poverty.
The other way of doing business is to take pencil and paper and write down what you can at the very least calculation hope to make. Figure that you will make half a crop, our observation being that the average man means by a full crop a very big crop indeed. Figure that the crop will be sold at low prices—the cotton at five cents a pound. Figure what it will cost you to make the crop—how many dollars and how many cents you will have to pay out for fertilizers and labor and for mending plows and wagons and harness. When you have written down every item of expense, add twenty five per cent. to cover expenses that you can not think of but which, you may be sure, will bring themselves to your attention later on. Add up these figures and compare them with the amount of money that you will have available for the year. Then you will know precisely how much you can afford to spend and come out even at the end of the year. Make a firm resolve that you will not live beyond that sum. Watch yourself and your family day by day and see that you and they are keeping themselves within the limit. To do this may mean and will mean for hundreds of families that they must make a quick, sudden and painful change in living. Luxuries that they have always been accustomed to must be cut off, coarser clothes perhaps must be worn, each member of the family perhaps must work harder and possibly do work of a more unpleasant character; but at the end of the year this way of living will have resulted in paying debts and in placing the man and his family on a good business footing.
In business, the hardest thing to do is to look facts in the face. To realize that notes must be paid. To recognize that "you can not eat your cake." It is so easy to take for granted that cotton will go to nine cents and it is so easy to spend money with that expectation as a basis. The man who looks at the future and calculating closely what he can do and must do and then tries hard to do it is almost sure to get along.

Human Stomach is Removed.
Woman Lives After Operation Has Been Performed.

She is Gaining Strength—Surgeons Now Assert That the Organs Are Not Necessary in Life.
New York Medical Record.

"The feat itself is the most brilliant and daring ever attempted in recent surgical history, but the attendant discovery that the stomach is not a vital organ is even more important. Hitherto it has been considered utterly impossible for a person to live without a stomach. With the fall of this long recognized axiom the old theories of medicine and surgery may be entirely changed and the field of possibilities which the discovery opens up is practically limitless.

"The operation which has so startled the medical world was performed in Zurich, Switzerland, by Dr. Carl Schlatler on September 6th last. The subject was Anna Landis, fifty-six years old and a silk weaver. This woman had complained for years of stomach trouble. Dr. Schlatler diagnosed the case and found she was suffering from an exceptionally large oval tumor in her stomach.

"The operation lasted nearly two hours and a half. The loss of blood was slight.
"The operation was wonderfully performed. The patient, although old and feeble, exhibited but few of the serious symptoms that usually follow a vital operation. Minute quantities of liquid food were given to her at short intervals. With the exception of occasional vomiting, this food seemed to be assimilated, despite the absence of a food receptacle. In the second week after the operation she was given solid food. It was retained and digested without discomfort. And even Dr. Schlatler himself marveled at the almost unexpected success of his bold work. He was handicapped in giving the patient solid food, because she had only one tooth left in her head.

"On October 11th, a month and five days after the stomach had been removed, Anna Landis left her bed. By November 25th she was feeling perfectly well and was walking about. Her weight increased and apparently she was in for better health than before the operation.
"Dr. Edmund Charles Wendt, of New York city, the correspondent of The Medical Record, who obtained Dr. Schlatler's personal account of the feat, states that on the 9th of this month he saw Anna Landis, and that to all intents and purposes she is a well woman. She is still under observation at the Zurich county hospital, but is able to do her full share of work in the wards. She has had many medical visitors from all quarters of the globe, and by this time has grown quite proud of her depleted body."

How to Break An Ox.
Somebody once wrote to an editor to ask him "how to break an ox." The editor replied: "If only one ox, a good way would be to hoist him by means of a log chain attached to his tail, to the top of a pole forty feet from the ground, then hoist him by a rope tied to his horns to another pole. Then let descend on his back a five ton pile driver, and if that don't break him let him start a newspaper and trust people for subscriptions.
It breaks every one that tries it, and the ox is not likely to prove an exception to the rule. One of the two ways will do it sure."

WARNING.—Persons who suffer from coughs and colds should heed the warnings of danger and save themselves suffering and fatal results by using One Minute Cough Cure. It is an infallible remedy for coughs, colds, croup and all throat and lung troubles. J. E. Kaufmann.

Match, which was intended to be funny, but which proved to be mean. It embodied the fossilized slur on old maids, and averred that in the hugging matches now in vogue in divers places, while young girls and widows were hugged at a dollar or two each, and a very few seconds allowed at that for the thrilling performance, old maids were hugged at 3 cents each or two for a nickel, with no limit as to time. I'll vouch that the author of that paragraph is a bachelor who keeps his blacking brush on the mantle-piece, and his clean shirts in the coal box, and who is a good enough judge of whisky to pull the stopper out of a bottle of corn whisky and smell the negro that hoed the corn. And if the truth were only known, he has been rejected by a dozen girls, perhaps some old maids, any one of whom would have to have supported him had she been fool enough to have had him, and all of whom render thanks night and morning now that they had sense enough to kick him. I am an old maid, and I am happy. I don't know how it feels to uncork a bottle of perogoric at 2 a. m. to quiet a squall that was caused by a colic instead of a cloud; and I am ignorant of the process of pulling off a pair of muddy boots at midnight and swathing with wet towels the burning, aching forehead of a "lord of creation," who promised with a lie upon his lips at the holy altar, to love, honor and protect me as long as he lived. I repeat it, I don't know anything about these delights of matrimony. I suppose I ought to be pitied. But I had rather be laughed at because I am not married, than not to be able to laugh because I am married. If you will excuse me for being confidential, I'll say in closing, that during a career of 30 years I've only been hugged one time. On that occasion, strange to say, I got three scents. I didn't want any more. The three scents I got were scents of disgusting hair oil, rum and tobacco.

What Everybody Knows.
Or ought to know, is that health and even life itself depends upon the condition of the blood. Feeding, as it does, all the organs of the body, it must be rich and pure in order to give proper nourishment. Hood's Sarsaparilla makes the blood pure, rich, nourishing, and in this way strengthens the nerves, creates an appetite, tones the stomach and builds up the health. Hood's Sarsaparilla wards off colds, pneumonia and fevers, which are prevalent at this time. 12

His Motto.
An editor recently went to see his best girl. She had yawned six times, looked at the clock four times, and pretended to be half asleep three times, but the young editor who was calling upon her was so much in love that he did not observe these manifestations of weariness. At length she said: "Most newspapers have mottoes, haven't they?" "Some have." "Has yours one?" "Yes." "What is it?" "We are here to stay." "I could have sworn it was something of that kind," she said with a sigh and the silence was resumed.

You can't afford to risk your life by allowing a cold to develop into pneumonia or consumption. Instant relief and a certain cure are afforded by One Minute Cough Cure. J. E. Kaufmann.
