NOTED MEN AND WOMEN WHO HAVE WEPT IN PUBLIC.

Victoria's Emotion When Told That It Was Her Destiny to Wear a Crown-The Three Times In Rossini's Life When He "Played the Woman."

Many of the great people who have written their names large in the history of their time have been known to shed tears. The majority, however, wept for others' woes, but smiled upon their

Queen Victoria wept when informed that it was her destiny to wear a crown and rule a vast empire. The incident was seized upon by Mrs. Browning for one of her most beautiful peems, "She Wept to Wear a Crown," and her majesty has ever since been a warm admirer of the writings of this poet. Sixty years later, at her je ilee, the queen sobbed before thousands of her subjects. Another notable occasion was at the funeral of Prince Henry of Battenberg. As the burial service was being recited Britain's monarch was seen to be crying piteously.

One will never forget the universal lamentation aroused by the death of the Duke of Clarence. When the end came, the Princess of Wales, who had throughout her son's illness watched him with the greatest devotion, utterly collapsed and cried for some time as though her heart would break. A few days later, as the funeral procession left Sandringham for the railway station, followed on foot by the Prince of Wales. it was impossible to hide his grief, and the heir apparent was forced to find relief in copious tears. The Duke of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha has also been seen to cry in public. In April, 1896, while the marriage ceremony of his daughter was in progress his royal highness was observed to be weeping. Mr. Gladstone during the delivery of one of his great orations concerning the Bulgarian atrocities was so carried away by his feelings that tears coursed down his cheeks, and the flow of his eloquence was arrested for a few minutes so that he might recover his composure. The Grand Old Man's great rival, Lord Salisbury, too, has been known to "play the woman." The tragic death of the Earl of Iddesleigh will not easily fade from one's memory. When Lord Salisbury knew that his old friend the carl had expired after ascending the stairs at the foreign office, he was so overcome that for a time he sobbed bitterly. Thirty years ago the Earl of Halsbury, then plain Mr. Hardinge Giffard, was defending ex-Governor Eyre concerning the massacres that had occurred in Jamaica. Having depicted Eyre protecting the people from outrages, Mr. Giffard asked passionately whether for so doing his client was to be done to death by persecution. "Good God," he exclaimed, "is this justice?" and wound up his apostropne by bursting into tears. Then the court adjourned for

When the lord chief justice was known to fame as Sir Charles Russell, he on many occasions by the stirring force of his eloquence made judges weep and bathed juries in salt tears. He has himself, too, more than once been so enthusiastic in his client's behalf that the floodgates of his eyes have been opened. At the historic trial known as the Parnell commission so moved was he during the delivery of his great speech in desense of Mr. Parnell that he wept for | No. some moments, while many of the on- 11: lookers had damp evelids.

Professor Herkomer, R. A., tells in one of his lectures that his well known picture, "Chelsea Pensioners In Church," was painted against the advice of all his firends, but he completed it and sent it to the Royal academy. What expectation, what anxieties and fears, were in that act! How he waited! 2 3 Two letters, respectively by Leighton and Richmond, R. A., brought news that the judges on seeing the work clapped their hands. Herkomer at the time was at a sickbed, and as he read he fell on his knees and wept. When that brave man, Dr. Jameson, realized at the battle which put the climax to his famous raid that he had failed in his mission and was compelled to surrender, he burst into tears and cried for some time like a child. But it was not through fear for his own safety, but owing to the thought that his failure might place his conner, men in

Rossini, on being asked how he liked Paganini's playing, said he had only wept three times in his life-first, on the failure of his earliest opera; secondly, when in a boat with some friends a turkey stuffed with truffles, which had been provided for their dinner, fell overboard and was lost; thirdly, on hearing for the first time Paganini's divine performance on his beloved vio-

Lord Eldon when attorney general was in the habit of closing his speeches with some remarks justifying his own character. At the trial of Horne Tooke, speaking of his own reputation, he said, It is the little inheritance I have to leave my children, and by God's help I will leave it unimpaired." Here he shed tears, and, to the astonishment of those present, Mitford, the solicitor general, began to weep. "Just look at Mitford!" said a bystander to Horne Tooke. "What on earth is he crying for?" Tooke replied, "He is crying to think what a small inheritance Eldon's children are likely to get."

From the examples given it may be concluded that it is not always unmanly to weep. Indeed, as Henry Ward Beecher said, tears are often the telescope by which we see far into beaven .- London
