hours of 10a m., and 4p. m., all those trac's or parcels of land described as follows, to-portions of the public road leading from the northern suburbs of Columbia to the Broad river bridge have been in a notoriously bad condition. The other day, Captain Sligh, with his chain gang, got on it and put it in thorough repair with a composite of sand and clay, for which humane act he richly deserves the everlasting thanks and gratitude of man and best who travel that way. Out of the abundance of a heart overflowing with gratitude, a Lexingtonian, whose business often calls him that way, publicly thanked Capt. Sligh for his considerate thoughtfulness through the columns of the Columbia State, over which incident our darling duck of a lover across the Congaree goes into an ecstatic state of jubilant delight as he vainly imagines that he sees in it the consummation of his long cherished and fondly nursed dream of going to the parson with Lexington, and he waltzes up to her with honeyed words of flattery and like the spider and the fly politely endeavors to inveigle her into his pretty little parlor so that he can entangle her delicate little feet in the web he has spun and make her a victim of her own vanity and become a nonentity in the household of consolodation in the politics, finances and commerce of that great city of magnificent dimension. Lex ington has a chain gang system; it has a competent and efficient County Supervisor, who is a practical bridge builder; it has deserts of sand and hills of clay innumerable to make as much "composite" as is needed at a little or no cost; it has just as good roads as Richland has, hence the li'tle piece of road which has just been put in traveling condition by Captain Sligh is no argument why L xington should be placed in a position whe e she can be taxed at the will of her out of the fire.
