Capt. Jas. C. Fort, of Pelion, was here Monday on business, and returned the same day. He is one of our old original townsmen, so few of whom are left, that we are always glad to see them.

TILLMAN SAYS COMMITTEE SHOULD GET BUSY

Will Speak for the Dispensary at Some of the Campaign Meetings This Summer.

Senator Tillman spent Sunday in Columbia among friends and relatives. He was in splendid spirits, but had very little to say about State or national matters, beyond throwing a few rocks at the dispensary investigating committee for taking so long to get busy and for saving what little thunder it has for late in the summer for political effect upon the primaries. The senator appears to have gotten in some fine work in the recuperating line in the week he has spent at home. When he came through here a week ago from the strenuous fight at Washington the effects of the fierce battle of brains were visible in the lines of his face—he calls them his lines of thought—and in his complexion. But yesterday he showed that he had entirely recovered.

The Record man tried to get him off to himself with the idea of putting a bug in his ear that would be productive of some "hot copy," but the senator wouldn't respond to this move.

"If you are going to print what I am going to say we had as well have it out right here. Are you scared some of these people will scoop you? What do you want to know, anyhow?"

"The way an interview just printed from you is headed seems to give the impression that you would like to see the investigating committee shut up shop now because you fear the revelations they might have to make against your dispensary." Suggested the man seeking readable "copy."

"My God, young man," said the hero of the rate bill fight, swinging about in his arm chair as if reaching for his pitchfork, "if I took seriously the way the newspapers head things and weave in insinuations I'd have gone crazy long ago." This set off a merry laugh, in which he joined heartily. "Nobody is objecting to the investigation. What some of us are kicking about is that they don't go ahead and bring out something. This investigation has been turned into a political game. They are prolonging the thing with a view to having an effect on the primaries. I don't think it will amount to much. I don't believe they have anything of consequence to bring out. Why don't they get busy with the old board before they begin on the new board?"

"How about the Black-Lyon affair, senator?"

"That is a personal matter between Messrs. Lyon and Black. I have nothing to do with it. I see they say that witnesses have been intimidated, threatened with being shot. I felt comparatively safe myself when I was before the committee to give my testimony—or make my little stump speech, as some of the newspapers said. I believe they said they had a guard around about that time."

The senator was feeling like a man with a royal straight in his hand and was making fun of everything. Senator Tillman said he would speak for the dispensary at some of the campaign meetings this summer, but did not expect to get around to all of them.—Columbia Evening Record.

We are indebted to Prof. D. B. Johnson, president Winthrop Normal and Industrial college, for a complimentary invitation to attend the commencement exercises of that excellent college, June 3, 4 and 5.
