Quantity of Deering cotton seed. This is by far the most prolific cotton I have ever planted. Almost doubled yield last year over other varieties with equal amount of fertilizer and under same process of cultivation. I find it especially adapted to the different soils of my farm. Is not easily affected by extreme weather conditions. Guaranteed to be as productive as any on the market and is equally adapted to the different soils of this section.

The Cotton Situation.

The outlook does not seem to be very good for higher priced cotton at any time in the near future.

The cotton mills are having dull times. The selling agents report that it is difficult to sell goods. Buyers, they say, look for lower prices, and are buying only in small quantities, seeming to be afraid to load up with goods at present prices with a slump staring them in the face.

And it makes it hard on the mills.

In fact many of the selling agents are advising the mills to close down altogether for 60 days, arguing that this is the only real way to curtail the output and in this way hold up the prices. The mills, though, seem unwilling to do this, and it is likely that the curtailment will be made by running short time or with short help.

A few of the mills are in good shape, having sold ahead some time ago, and if these orders are not cancelled these mills will be in good shape.

But the situation does not hold on much promise of higher prices for cotton any time soon.

And just now the farmers are getting ready to plant another crop. What are they going to do about it?

A big crop of cotton planted within the next few weeks will tend to further reduce the price. A reduced acreage will help to hold up the price.

These must be plain facts to everybody. The price of cotton now rests very largely in the hands of the farmers themselves. What are they going to do about it?—Anderson Mail.

A New Rule Suggested.

The candidates are coming out—all "subject to the rules of the democratic primary." Now let us suggest an additional rule. When the county convention meets a rule should be adopted providing that each candidate must pledge himself that he will not while a candidate treat any voter to meat or drink or otherwise. This "treating" has not been a great evil in this county as in some others, but it is an evil that grows and it is best to nip it in the bud. A rule of this kind will be a blessing to the candidate and also to the voter, for it will save the one from being bled and the other from being debauched.—Newberry Observer.

Obituary.

Emma Lavinia Kyzer was born December 24, 1876, and died April 11, 1908, making her age 31 years, 4 months and 17 days. She was the wife of David Lucas and the mother of seven children, all living. She leaves a father, husband and children with many relatives and friends to mourn her death, but we trust that their loss is her gain. She was a member of the M. E. church and was buried at Boiling Springs church by the writer.

Reward for Incendiary.

Gov. Ansel has offered a reward of $100 for the arrest of the party or parties who burned the home of Mrs. E. C. Moye, about six miles south of New Brookland, in this county, about ten days ago. To the Editor of The Dispatch:

The farmers are busy planting corn and cotton. It seems that they are planting a larger acreage in cotton than was planted last year. I am sorry to see them making such a big mistake.

The small grain is looking well and prospects for a large yield are good.

So far the indications are that there will be a large fruit crop in this section, especially peaches.

Some of our Union men are looking droopy over the low price of cotton, but I hope they will continue to hold for 15 cents.
