Negroes Will Hang Friday.

Ned and Brack Toland have only two more days in which to prepare to meet their maker. On Friday next, between the hours of ten and two, they will be led to the scaffold by one of the bravest sheriffs that ever held this high office in South Carolina.

Sheriff Corley will bring the prisoners over from Columbia on the early morning train Friday, which is due to arrive at 7:30. They will at once be locked in the jail, where they will be kept until the hour of execution.

The hanging will be strictly private, as Sheriff Corley will see that the law in this particular is carried out to the letter. He has had hundreds of applications for admittance, and while the Sheriff would like to have the hanging public, the law says not, and he will follow the law at any and all hazards.

It is quite likely that the prisoners will be accompanied from Columbia by a very strong guard, as was the case when they were brought here for trial.

Met Awful Death.

Laurens, April 25.—Mr. Edwin Hill, a young man of the Cross Hill section, was killed yesterday afternoon in a most horrible manner. He was ploughing in a field some distance from his father's home and, it is presumed, unhitched his mule from the plough, mounted it and rode toward a spring for water. The mule ran away with the young man, throwing him and dragging him all around the field and through the woods.

The tracks in the vicinity show that the animal was headed towards the spring and also that the body of Mr. Hill was dragged for a considerable distance.

The mule went to the house about dark and, of course, caused fears on the part of the family. A party went out in search of young Hill and at 11 o'clock found him in an unconscious state near the field where he had been ploughing. His body was horribly cut and mangled, beaten almost to pieces against the trees and rocks. He never regained consciousness and died last night at 2 o'clock.

Mr. Hill was a hard working, industrious young man, 18 years of age. He was a son of Mr. J. C. Hill, of Cross Hill, and a member of one of the largest families in the county.

Mid Lofty Pines and Leafy Groves, COLLEGE PLACE is the Most Enchanted Situation in Columbia for Homes.

I BUILT AT COLLEGE PLACE.

I WISH I HAD.

The accompanying illustrations tell most clearly the lesson of human experience. Some people overlook the fact that a good building amid inferior surroundings is never worth even its approximate cost, while on the other hand desirable environments means satisfaction and profit to the owner. The expense of building in a choice location is no greater than in an inferior one, and the results are as wide apart as the poles.

Take your choice in the above pictures, locate in the midst of factories and unsightly surroundings, or choose a superlatively high and healthful location where every development is of the highest order.

Like Every Other Growing City COLUMBIA Will Have One Select Suburb,

And the question naturally arises as to where it will be located. That question settled, there will be the usual rush to secure lots. Atlanta, Birmingham, Norfolk and other cities which have but little advantage over Columbia in point of population, or prospects of future growth, have already advanced the value of choice suburban property to prices ranging from $40 to $125 per foot front, and the time is not remote when Columbia's choice suburb will be held at correspondingly high values. We therefore most confidently expect College Place lots to appreciate very rapidly in value, claiming as the following reasons will justify that it is shortly to become the fashionable suburb of this growing city. Lots now selling at $7.50 per foot front should bring $10 next year and $20 per foot front within five years, and not less than $50 per foot front within 10 years. These estimates are very conservative supported by the following correct observations.

First. Its location north of the city is the direct path of the natural growth of the city.

Second. It is situated on an elevation 55 feet above the city, having perfect drainage, and a sandy soil, and is far enough removed from the river to insure perfect health. This is a most important factor in selecting a location for a home.

Third. It being beyond the city limits, a saving of about two per cent. is made on taxes.

Fourth. The improvements far exceed those in the older portion of the city, and are now soon to be completed at no additional cost to the lot owner. These improvements, being of the most artistic and substantial character, argue most convincingly in favor of College Place becoming the select residential suburb of Columbia.

Fifth. The splendid Columbia College is a permanent and substantial structure, and destined to exert a most wonderful influence in drawing to that locality the best class of purchasers. The culture and refining influence of this institution will count for very much in the advancement of College Place values.

Reasons may be multiplied indefinitely for locating at College Place, and it should be noted that it costs no more to erect a dwelling in a choice location than in an inferior one, and the difference in the outcome is as wide as the poles.

A liberal discount is made to purchasers who will build within one year from date of purchase, but this opportunity will not remain open indefinitely, it applying only to a limited number of buildings.

Contracts are now being let for several new residences, and without doubt at least 20 new residences will be erected this season.

Every reader of The Dispatch knows that real estate in Columbia and section is rapidly enhancing in value, and that there is no investment so secure as well located land in or near a growing city. If Atlanta lots six miles from the city are worth $40 to $60 per foot front, is it not reasonable to suppose that College Place lots which are more favorably located will within 10 years bring as much per foot? That will make the lots selling today on easy terms at $20 to $30 per foot worth $2,500 per lot. The exercise of a little foresight will place the reader on the highway to prosperity.

50 lots have been sold and the demand is growing more active as the public becomes better acquainted with the property.

The time to act is NOW. Phone 326 or write and make date with the sales manager to look at the property.
