After the whipping the child left the house, and a few minutes later the mother heard him scream. She found the child in the well, his curls showing on the surface of the water.

LEVER'S ELECTION IS DISPUTED.

A special from Washington says: B. Hart Moss, of Orangeburg, attorney for Representative Lever, appeared before the clerk of the house of representatives and the testimony in the contested election case of Dantzler against Lever. There was no special interest attaching to the opening of this testimony. It is one of the usual formalities that has to be gone through with every time one of the South Carolina negroes believes he has reached the point where the county needs his services in congress. As a matter of fact members of the committee, before which these contested cases have been heard, have not infrequently expressed the opinion that the county authorities in South Carolina might well employ the time of Prioleau Dantzler and Myers in looking after some of these fellows by giving them work on the roads, where they are needed. Mr. Lever's case will be decided as usual, next year.

Mr. Moss is about the best advertising medium Orangeburg has sent out in many a day. He is enthusiastic over his town, with a fine six or seven story hotel, and the new federal building soon to be erected, Orangeburg, he says, will compare favorably with any town in the state.

If there were half as many good things said of a man before he is dead as there are after, it would probably make a fool out of him.—Home and Farm.

Engineer and Fireman Killed.

The derailment of an extra freight, No. 275, at Styx, a few miles south of Columbia, on the Savannah line of the Southern Railway, in this county, on Thursday morning about 10 o'clock, caused the death of Engineer W. H. Turner, of Columbia, and Fireman J. Y. Carlisle, a native of Fairfield. Just how the derailment occurred will probably never be known, but it is thought to have been due to a defective tie or rail. The engine and five freight cars turned completely over and several other cars left the track. Engineer Turner was fatally injured and lived but a short time, and Fireman Carlisle was buried under the wreckage, his body not being taken out until several hours afterwards.
