Gen. Jones Was Here.

The Hon. A. W. Jones, comptroller general, came over from Columbia on Monday morning and effected a final settlement with the county auditor. When seen by a Dispatch man Gen. Jones said:

"There is not a better set of county officials in the State than the officers of Lexington county. The county auditor's books are perfect and everything is entirely satisfactory. So are the books of the county treasurer, county superintendent of education and county supervisor. In the supervisor's office, under the present system employed, it is possible to tell where every dollar of the county's money goes and for what purpose it is spent."

Gen. Jones has many friends in Lexington and it was regretted that he could not spend the day here.
