Swansea Letter.

To the Editor of The Dispatch.
Swansea's progress continues and her enterprises still pushes to the front. Mr. Reynolds is putting in a system of three seventy-saw gins. Mr. W. B. Rast is also putting in another plant of three gins to the gins of his already running, and added to the two that Langford & Derrick own at the water mill, make up the total of eleven gins in town and Madam Rumor says that Swansea last season ginned more cotton than any other place in Lexington county.

Lybrand & Lybrand have started their two-story brick store and Jake Sighler's new house will soon be painted.
With the upbuild we have had our misfortunes. A few days since lightning struck the steeple of the Baptist church and tore all the weather-boarding and ceiling from the entire end and badly shattered the blinds and weather-boarding of steeple. It shivered the corner upright post of one corner and scattered the splinters all around and over a little bird's nest and neither of the little birds were hurt or disturbed in their airy home. He careth even for the little sparrows also.

A few years ago I was coming down the Lexington public road and driving hastily to make Mr. Joe Reeder's, at the historic Cross Roads, before the approach of a big, angry looking cloud, and met "old uncle John Hammond" out on the road and, saluting him, said I could not chat as that cloud looked very bad. The old man said: "Oh! it can't rain 'till God gives those little creatures notice to shut in," pointing with his walking stick to the little ants running around as easily as if no danger was near them at all. I saw the force of the argument and entered into a chat with the old gentleman and in a few minutes he said: "See now, the clouds are all gone and the little ants are still busy on their rounds."

Another little vacant chair is now in our town. Diphtheria a few days since took from us the little boy of George Williams, and another little pilgrim has returned to its home to be forever at rest and free from care and vexations and its little troubles.

The other children were forbidden to go on the street a day or two to avoid any other cases. Science and experiments, I believe, have decided that to try to avoid is almost useless, as the germs are everywhere in the air and will only attack and prosper in the little throat with suitable conditions for its ravages. The examinations by experts and trialists have about demonstrated that one little mouth and throat may have these germs without injury to itself and yet transmit them to its little unconscious, innocent playmate, whose little throat-let is in a better condition to receive and fasten this dreaded visitant.

One of the first lines I learned in physiology was that a healthy, robust human being is almost immune against disease. He is like a well fortified citadel in which to garrison within is at all times able to repel the assaults from without. The weakest places in the fortress always are first to receive the attack from a skilful assailant.

General cases of typhoid fever have been in and around Swansea. Mr. Thomas Stabler has been a severe sufferer from it and several of his family have been prostrate with it. Mrs. George Moore has been sick for some time but am glad to say she is much better now.

Crops are good, bad and indifferent. The large rains have badly damaged crops generally and they are slow to respond. I have seen very few fields of well-filled corn and the gathering at harvest time will disappoint many a jolly farmer.

The lady visitors of our town have been legion—too numerous to mention.

The campaign will soon open and the candidates will be as thick as the evil spirits. Spectator.
Swansea, Aug. 8.
