A Remarkable Recovery.

Picked up for dead but saved from the dead wagon before it started for the morgue, when a faint sign of life was detected, eighteen-year-old Esther Harris, whose escape from the Triangle fire last year was made at the cost of a broken neck and back, has been cured. Unable to move even a finger for eleven months after the tragedy, in which 147 men and women were killed, she can now stand and walk unassisted, a feat rare in surgery, whose teachings are that in almost every case of total paralysis resulting from a fracture of the neck the victim never regains command of motion. She now wears a steel and leather harness to support her head, but in a few months hopes to discard this. In other respects she is perfectly well.

Pay Up Please.

We are greatly in need of money just now to pay paper and other bills, and will, therefore, greatly appreciate it if those of our readers who are in arrears will call or send by mail and renew their subscriptions at once. We don't want to stop anybody's paper. This is campaign year and you will need The Dispatch to keep you posted.

Both Ladies Drown.

Ellen O'Rourke, a young attendant in the Manhattan state hospital for the insane on Wards Island gave her life in a vain endeavor to save her chum, Margaret Hughes, from death by crowning off the southern extremity of the island. Miss Hughes fell from a ledge into the current. Miss O'Rourke caught her when she was going down the second time. But in her effort Miss O'Rourke had overstepped the safety ledge and herself fell into the stream. Miss Hughes caught her chum about the neck and there was a desperate struggle between them. Finally both girls were dragged down.

On Buying Hay.

Bamberg Herald.
Hay is now $40 a ton, the highest price ever known. Yet the people in South Carolina buy hay when they could raise all the forage they need and some to sell. We can never become a really prosperous agricultural country until this sort of thing is stopped.

STALLINGS & ARMSTRONG,

NEW BROOKLAND, S. C.
The house that sells MORE GOODS FOR SAME MONEY SAME GOODS FOR LESS MONEY

JOTHAM AND "DOC"
And the "Happy Thought" Buggy

I SHAN'T never forget the time young Doc Armstrong first located in this destrict. He was a hifalutin feller, an' afore hard knocks had driv' some hoss-sense into his head he'd figgered out more ways o' makin' a blamed fool of hisself than Adam ever dreamed of. The Doc thought he was jest a leetle mite better'n the rest of us. Wouldn't nothin' do fer his outfit but the fanciest things money'd buy: Fancy medicine case with silver-top bottles—fancy plug hat—fancy shiny leather shoes—an' so on. Not havin' the money to put into an automobile, he kinder straddled the propy-sition by throwin' away some of his good dollars fer a fancy wagon with a high soundin' name. Sorter stuck up his nose at our "Babcocks" 'cause they didn't smell o' money. Well, after takin' one look at that wagon, I jest grinned. 'Twas sure a purty affair with all sorts o' gingerbread work onto it. But, Great Scott! 'twan't no fit thing fer the sorter roads the Doc'd be 'bleeged to travel over. This wagon foolishness was over 'bout the quickest of all the fool things that the Doc projected. The first time out, his hoss stumbled an' fell in the shafts an' broke 'em to finders. The next thing, he discovered he was 'bleeged to clean an' file the blamed thing after every trip. The dust an' grit'd sift into the workin' parts, 'spite all he could do. Fin'ly, in comin' down hill one day, the wheels struck a stone in the road—an' then—Who-o-sh! 'Twas all over with, 'ceptin' cleanin' up the muss! The Doc cussed considerable. He writ to the makers, but as near's I kin kalkilate, the only satisfaction he got was in their askin' what did he expect. Then the Doc cussed some more. He was an artist in his way—the Doc was! I felt sorter sorry fer the skee-sicks, an' I b'lieved that whereas he wouldn't a-listened to reason afore, he was probably open to conviction now. So, I suggested that he send to the H. H. Babcock Company, Watertown, N. Y., an' git one o' their "Happy Thought" wagons. I've got a "Happy Thought" myself—a Corning, with phaeton seat an' spring back. Had bought it about six months afore the Doc come to us. An' so I sez to him that he might hitch onto it fer a spell, to see how he liked it. I told him if he didn't find it the easiest-ridin', smoothest-runnin' vehicle he ever stepped into, he could call me a dough-head an' I'd answer to it. The Doc'd been too dum stuck-up at first to even look at my "Babcock." Now he begun to take an interst in things. He looked at the "Happy Thought" gear, an' blurted out: "By the powers!" sez he. "It's an easy chair, a cradle an' a hammock—all in one!" "That's her!" sez I. Then he examined the Bradley shaft couplin's, see-saved the shafts, clumb inter the seat an' teetered for a while, an' then sez: "Is she 'iled up, ready fer bizness? I may want to use it several days." Well, the Doc tried her fer a couple o' days, an' then he come 'round to me an' sez: "Say, Jotham, what'll ye take fer that wagon?" "She ain't fer sale," I sez. "Wouldn't sell it nohow fer less'n it cost me—'s' what'd be the use in my doing that, seein' I'd have to send off right away fer 'nother jest like it?" "Yes, that's so," sez he. "But how'd ye know ye can git 'nother jest like it? This one's the finest wagon I ever rid in. Why, it's like floatin' in the air, almost! An' they ain't no rattle or squeakin' to it, an' my hoss sometimes actooally seems to fergit he's hitched to anything, it comes 'long so easy an' still-like!" "That's all right, Doc," sez I. "You needn't have no fears 'bout them 'ere 'Happy Thoughts'—they're all alike, so fur as easy runnin' goes. The Babcock Company g'arantees 'em. They've ben a-sellin' their wagons an' other vehicles in this neighborhood nigh onto forty years—an' I ain't never heard nobody find no fault with the way H. H. Babcock Company does bizness!" Well, the Doc got a "Happy Thought" piano box wagon, an'—say! Ticked? Why he was the happiest feller ye ever seen when he found 'twas equal to mine on the road. That was about four years ago—an' if ye want to know anything 'bout the Babcock "Happy Thought," jest ask Doc Armstrong. He's drivin' in that same wagon today, an' the only thing he ever done to it was to have a new set o' tires put onto it. Mine's got the same tires yit. An' tain't fer sale, neither.
