Indiana .- Oglesby, the Governor of this State, is on the rampage. He is a blood and ouns Radical, and in the course of a big speech at Plymouth the other day attempted to blarney the Irish by abusing the President and Secretary Seward for enforcing the neutrality laws during the recent Fenian raid in Canada. An Irishman in the crowd asked him why Gongress did not repeal the neutrality laws during that raid, instead of spending their time passing bills over the President's veto.

This got his Excellency where his hair was short. He raved and ranted and called his interlocutor a traitor.

"You lie," says Pat.

"You was sent here by the Copperheads," says O., "to create a row."

"Divil a bit," says Pat, "answer me question."

"You're a traitor, I say," bawls the Governor. The Rads, you see, are very heavy on this word. Its such a knock down argument.

"That's another lie," roared the son of Brian Borough, with all his Irish up.

"I can whip you! I can mash your old head any day," says this nice old Governor, and herewith makes a dart at Pat who, no ways daunted, prepares to meet his "loyal" foe. But just here the police interfered and the mob was cheated out of all the fun. Singular thing, this Northern speechifying.

A GEORGIA WIDOW .- An anecdote is related by a certain' Squire, which proceeds as follows: "Oh!" said the 'Squire, "I wish I was married and well out of it. I dread it powerful. I'd like to marry a widow. I allers liked widows, once I know'a one down in Georgia, that suited my ideas adzactly. About a week after her husband died, she started down to the graveyard, whar they planted him, and she read the prescription on to the monument. When she got there she stood looking at the stones which was put at each end of the grave, with an epitaph on 'em that the minister had writ for her. Then she burst out, "Oh! h-o-o!" says sne, 'Jones was the best of men. I remember how the last time he come home, about a week ago, he bro't down from town some sugar and a little tea, and some store goods for me, and lots of little necessaries, a little painted hoss for Jeems, which that blessed little child got his mouth all yaller with sucking of it; and then he kissed the children all round, and took down that good old fiddle of his'n, and played up that good "Rake her down, Sal, Oh rang-dang diddle.

SERVED HER RIGHT .- An amusing incident is told of a woman in England, whose husband, a rich man, died suddenly, without leaving any will. The widow, desirous to get all the property concealed her husband's death, and persuaded a poor shoemaker to take his place while a will could be made. Accordingly he was closely muffled in bed, as if very sick, and a lawyer was called to write a will. The shoemaker in a feebled voice, bequeathed half of all the property to the widow. "What shall be done with the remainder?" asked the lawyer. "The remainder," replied he, "I give and bequeath to the poor little shoemaker across the street, who has always been a good neighbor and a deserving man;" thus securing a rich bequest for himself. The widow was thunderstruck at the man's audacious cunning, but did not dare expose the fraud, and so two rogues shared the estate.

Oh! rang-dang diddle, dang, dang, da."

A well-dressed fellow, the other day, walking into a room where they were talking politics, and stretching himself to his full hight, exclaimed in a loud

"Where is a radical? Show mea radical, and I'll show you a liar!"

In an instant one of them exclaimed

"I am a radical sir!" "You are?"

"Yes, sir, I am."

"Well, just you step around the corner with me, and I'll show you a fellow who said a radical could not be found in the ward. Ain't he a liar?"

The Portland Press tell the following rather extravagant story to illustrate the | I. F. HUNT, wholesale theiving practiced there on J. H. HUNT, Jr., the night of the great fire: "One who had been slumbering peacefully in his | Promptly forward all Merchandize congrave in the Eastern Cemetery awoke, and walking forth, inquired if 'the day of judgment had come?' On being told that it was only Portland burning, he remarked that he would go back to his repose. On reaching his grave he found that somebody had stolen his coffin!"

DEATH OF FRANCIS, THE BARBER.-There were conveyed to his final resting place yesterday, the mortal remains of a venerable colored man, well known in this community. There are but a few now remaining of this class of persons, the mention of whose demise in this form will be a worthy record. John L. Francis, one of our oldest barbers, whose funeral services took place at St. Luke's Church yesterday, expired in this city on Saturday last, at the ripe old age of sixty-nine years. For a period of forty-one years he conducted his profession at his old stand on King-street, and gained for himself, by correct deportment and industry, the approval and support of LADIES' & GENTS' FURNISHING GOODS, many of our respectable citizens. Shortly after closing his earthly career, he bequeathed to deserving relatives and friends a fortune accumulated by energy and economy .- Charleston Courier.
