

No Home.
No home have I but in thy heart,
No other place of rest;
God! grant that naught but death can part,
Or hinder thee so blest!

No home have I, no shelter warm,
Without thy tender love;
The earth is but a wilderness,
And stars shine not above.

No home have I; if flowers die
Without the gentle dew,
Then why should souls not perish too
When from ship-birds adieu?

No home have I, this side the skies,
Except within thy breast;
Build there a fortress strong to shield,
And quell all vague unrest.

No home have I, no shelter warm,
Only within thy arms;
Strong may they prove! in time of need,
May I feel no alarm!

No home have I; hearts often sigh,
And winds blow from the west,
Then to the oak our closely clings
The tendril of the vine.

In Trust.
I send not back away from land
Far over the ocean's blue,
I place the helm within your hand,
And trust my bark to you.

Before it, on the deep unknown,
No stormy promise looms;
Behind it, in life's bosomy zone,
It leaves Spring's wealth of blooms.

Just out to sea it floats away,
A fair and buoyant thing;
It bears not in the dashing spray
A treacherous murmuring.

It sees not in the blue above
A cloud to bring dismay,
But beneath the gleaming bit of love
My bright bark floats away.

O, guide I will, my precious bark,
Till all is all to me;
I'll place the helm within your hand,
And trust it to the sea.

Kissing.

We propose to give a little sermon on kissing. We say sermon because kissing is like a sermon requiring two heads and an application. Our text shall be Worcester's definition of a kiss, viz: "A salute by kissing, or by joining lips." Of the origin of kissing little is known, but like Sancho Pansa we invoke blessings on the head of him who first invented it (kissing not sleep). Kisses may be divided into two great classes the kiss universal and the kiss sentimental. The first variety is a charming salutation common among ladies, and occurs generally upon any encounter public or private, and is very violent at times after an absence of three or four days. There is no particular form to be observed in these off-hand inoculations; it simply being required to "fire and fall back." But the sentimental kiss! Oh ye Gods, how shall we describe it? It occurs at all times and all seasons and seems to be never out of place. Othello's farewell kisses, which tender and heart-broken as they were, having no power to bring poor dead Desdemona back to life, were the most truly sweet and touching. And there were the grand, passionate kisses of Coriolanus—long as my exile, sweet as my revenge!—and sweet Romeo's dying kiss in the valuts of the Capulets. Under the head of sentimental may be ranked the young lover's kisses, which are rendered with optained optics. They occur commonly by pale moon-light in groves and shady retreats. We close this little sermon, by two quotations, one from Rev. Sidney Smith and the other by an unknown author. "We are in favor of a certain amount of shyness," says Sidney Smith, "when a kiss is proposed, but it should not be too long; and when the fair one gives it, let it be administered with warmth and energy; let there be soul in it. If she close her eyes immediately and sigh, the effect is greater. She should be careful not to slobber a kiss, but give it as a hummingbird runs his bill into a honeysuckle—deep but delicate." Our unknown author says, "What is a Kiss?—Really when people come to reflect upon the matter calmly, what can we see in a kiss? The lips part slightly and then touch the cheek softly and then they part, and the job is complete. There is a kiss in the abstract! View it in the abstract! Look at it philosophically! What is there in it? And yet millions on millions of souls have been made happy by a kiss. Go where you will, there is kissing. There is surely some virtue in it!"

Our sermon has drawn to a close, and the only application we can think of is to urge our readers to apply themselves industriously to the study of kissing, when it is hoped they will know more about it.

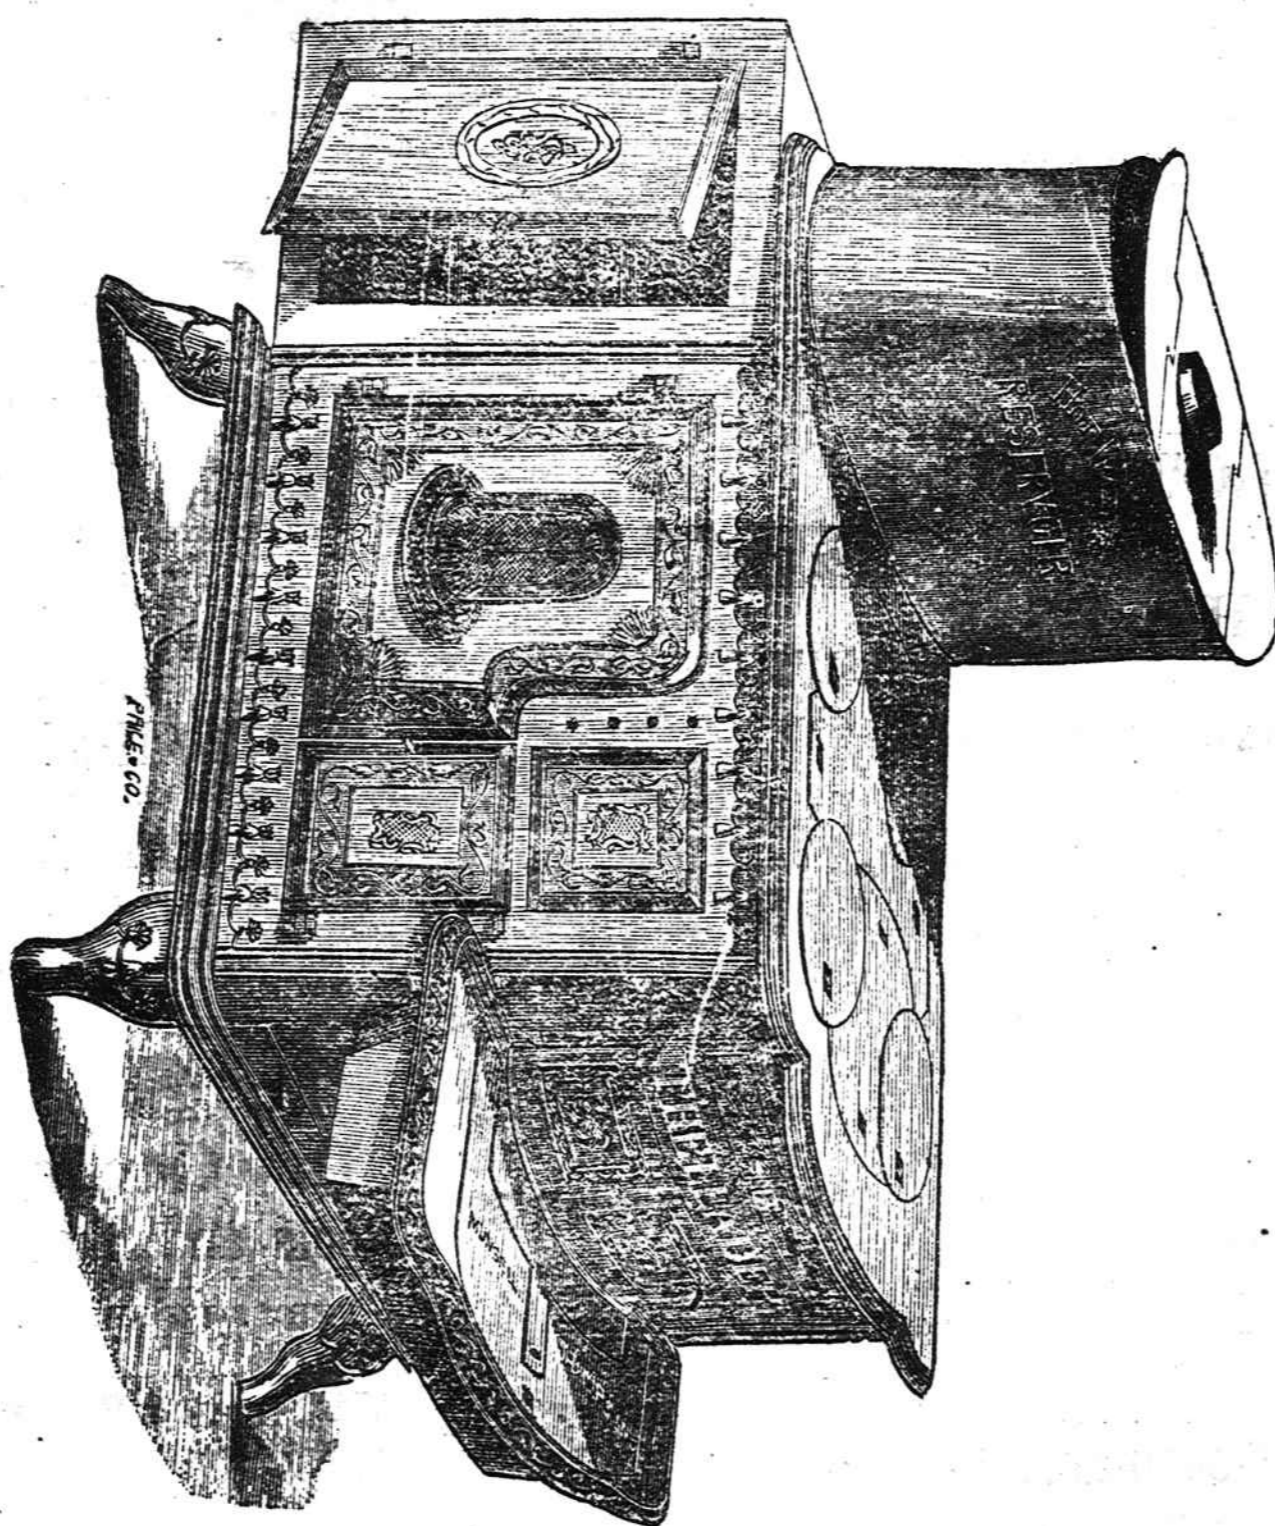

A wealthy bachelor, having had one or two lawsuits for breach of promise, now replies to a young lady whose private conversation: "No you don't Madam. It cuts me to the heart to be compelled to doubt the hopefulness of your intentions, but that sort of thing is played out. My rule is imperative; and if you have any business with me it must be transacted in the presence of two witnesses."

Judy quotes: "The market-ladies' hair has an upward tendency."

Brigham Young runs about seventy-five wives.

THE LEADER COOK STOVE.

WITH AND WITHOUT EXTENSION TOP.

The most beautiful Cooking Stove now in market. Will bake as quick, boil as fast, broil as nice, and do all kinds of cooking with as little fuel as any stove in use. It has many advantages which no other stove has. It is very heavy and durable, and is not so liable to crack as many stoves are. Besides the LEADER, I keep constantly on hand a large assortment of other patterns, all of which are warranted to operate well. Out of the many Stoves I have sold, not one to my knowledge has failed to give entire satisfaction.

The Tin Business is still carried on in its various branches, and all work will be done at short notice.
