How Hostetters Bitter's cure Dyspepsia. THE WHOLE STORY IN A NUTSHELL. The office of the stomach is to convert the food into a cream-like semi-fluid, called Clyme. This is effected partly by the action of a solvent, called the gastrie juice, which ixides from the coating of the stomach, and partly by a mechanical movement of that organ, which churus, as were, the dissolving allment. The Chyme passes from the stomach into the duodenum, or entrance to the bowels, where it is sub-jected to the action of the bile, and the nutritious portion of it converted into

Now, it is evident that if the great solvent, the gastric julce, is not produced in sufficient quantity, or if the mechanical action of the stonach is not sufficiently brisk, the first process of digestion will be brisk, the first picturess of digestion will be but imperfectly performed. It is also clear that if the liver, which plays such an important part in changing the nourishing portion of the chyme into the material of blood is congested, or in any unnatural condition, the second process will not be thoroughly accomplished. The result of the two faitures is dyspepsia, complicated with a fluid called Chyle, which eventually be-

The made in which nostreen's nittens operate in such cases is this: they invigorate the cellular membrane of the stomach which involves the gastrie juice, thereby insuring an ample sufficiency of the fluid to completely dissolve the food. They also act upon the nerves of the stom causing an acceleration of the mechanical movement necessary to reduce the food to a homogeneous mass. They also not specifically upon the liver, strength enirg it, and so enabling it to produce an ample and regular supply of bile, for the purpose of converting the nutritious par-ticles of the Chyme into Chyle, and promote the passage through the bowels of the useless debris.

In this way, nosterren's nittens cure dyspepsia and liver complaint. The explanation is plain, simple, philosophical and true.
