The State of the Nation. ANNUAL MESSAGE OF THE PRESIDENT TO CONGRESS.—THE SETTLEMENT TO THE VIRGINIUS QUESTION—THE ST. DOMINGO JOB—SLAVERY IN CUBA—SOUTHERN CLAIMS—REPEAL OF THE BANKRUPT LAW Washington, December 2.—The President's message was read to-day. It opens with a reference to the financial crisis, the Grangers' movement, and the Virginius mat-ber, which, it says, is in course of negotia-tion, and is likely to be amicably and honor-ably arranged. It refers to the Vienna ex-bosition, which was creditable to the artiably arranged. It refers to the Vienna exposition, which was creditable to the artisans of the United States; to the reception of the Western ambassadors by the Emperor of China, and to the need of further legislation to suppress the coolie trade. It recommends a commission for the purpose of considering and determining the amount to be paid for losses caused by the Confederate privateers, and refers to the mixed commission for determining claims between British subjects and mining claims between British subjects and American citizens, and asks for an appropriation to pay the amount of decisions against the United States. It also recommends a law ted against their persons and property du-ring the insurrection. It asks the decision of Congress on the subject of the action of the Ottoman and Egyptian governments, relieving foreign consuls of judicial powers. The president transmits the application of the Republic of Santo Domingo that the United States shall exercise a protectorate over the republic. The message discusses at some length the question of the right of expatriation, particularly as to the citizens of the United States residing permanently abroad with their families, and suggests legislation on the subject. It refers to the establishment of a republic in Spain, and to the efforts of the new government to abolish slave-forts of the new government to abolish slave-ry in all her dominions, which efforts are op-posed by the reactionary slaveholders of Cuba, who are vainly striving to stop the march of civilization. This baneful influence had thus succeeded in defeating the efforts of all liberal-minded men in Spain to abolish slave-ry in Cuba and in preventing the proposed ry in Cuba and in preventing the proposed reform in that island. In the interest of humanity, of civilization, and of progress, it was to be hoped that the evil influences might be soon averted. In reference to the capture of the Virginius and to the inhuman and illegal murder of affire three of the virginius and to the inhuman and illegal murder of affire three of the virginius and to the inhuman and illegal murder of affire three of the virginius and to the inhuman and illegal murder of affire three of the virginius and to the inhuman and illegal murder of affire three of the virginius and the virginius and the virginius and the virginius and to the inhuman and illegal murder of affire three of the virginius and virgin gal murder of fifty-three of her passengers and crew, he says that the Spanish govern-ment had recognized the justice of his demand, and had arranged for the immediate delivery of the vessel, and for the surrender of the survivors of the passon ters and crew, and for a salute to the flag, and for proceedings looking to the punishment of those who may be proved to have been guilty of illegal acts of violence towards citizens of the United States, and also towards indemnifying those who may be shown to be entitled to indemnity. The correspondence on the subject had been conducted in cipher and by cable, and was, therefore, not in condition to be submitted to Congress. The President expresses his conviction that the existence of African slavery in Cuba is a principal cause of the lamentable condition of the island, and does not doubt that Congress shares his hopes that it will soon be made to disappear, and that peace and prosperity will follow its abolition. He suggests two constitutional amendments—one to authorize the President to approve so much of any measure of Con-gress as his judgment may dictate, without approving the whole, and the other to provide that when an extra session of Congress is convened by executive pro- amation, legislation shall be confined to such subjects as the executive may bring before Congress, from time to time, in writing. He recom-mends the erection, at Washington, of a suitable building for the cabinet officers, and for such officials as now receive commutation Brown, Marion, S. C. for quarters-thus setting an example to the States, which may induce them to crect buildings for their senators. The message goes very fully into the financial question, and declares that the country never can have permanent prosperity until specie payments be reached. He recommends legislation pro-hibiting National banks from the payment of interest on deposits and forcing them into resumption, if only in legal tender notes. He suggests the question whether banks should not be made free, securing all the present safeguards to billholders. He notices the improvement in American shipbuilding during the past year, and hopes for a continuance of it. In regard to the problem of cheap transportation, he refers to the Eric and Illinois Canals, and suggests whether it would not be wise statesmanship to pledge to the States that own these canals that if they enlarge them the General Government look after and keep in navigable condition the great public highways with which those canals connect, to-wit: The Hudson River, the St. Clair flats, and the Illinois and Mississippi Rivers. He recommends a governmen exploration of the Upper Amazon River and its tributaries, a revision and codification of the tariff laws, and the opening of more mints. He endorses the recommendation of the postmaster-general for establishment of posturaser-general for establishment of pestoffice saving depositories, and invites the consideration of Congress to the proposition for a postal telegraph. He recommends legislation in regard to the judicial proceedings in Little and also in regard to the Analysis. in Utab, and also in regard to the bankrupt ey law, which he considers as productive of more evil than good; if it be not totally re-pealed, it should be modified in those porpealed, it should be modified in those por-tions providing for involuntary bankruptcy. Those portions should be repealed. He calls attention to the immense aggrega of claims against the government, many of them growagainst the government, many of them grow-ing me of the rebellion, and not a few of them fabricated and suppor by false testi-mony. He recommends that persons having claims be required to present them at an-early period, and that the personal attend-ance of witnesses be required by the Court of Claims. In regard to the Indian question he recommends a territorial form of government for the Indian Territory; he also recom mends such actions as will permit the settlement of a body of Russian colonists on the public lands, and endorses the proposition for a census in 1875. He endorses the Washington Board of Public Works, and speaks of the great improvement of the city under the operations of the board; recommends a liberal policy on the part of Congress in defraving a portion of the expenses, and suggests the establishment here of a national university. He recommends the passage of an enabling act for the admission of Colorado as a State, and suggests the opening of a consideration of the subject. canal for the purpose of irrigation from the eastern slope of the Rocky Mountains to the Missouri River. In conclusion, he renews his recommendation for general amnesty, and says there are a number of persons yet laboring under difficulties very small, but ernment in restoring them to elligibility to hold office, and he suggests the enactment of a law better to seen e the civil rights which freedom should secure, but has not effectually secured to the enfranchised slave. The reading of the message in the House occupied an It was ordered to be printed, and referred to the committee of To the Citizens of South Caro-

Fence Law.

Now, that the Legislature is in session we know of no more important subject to suggest for its consideration than a change of the present Fence Law, so as to make the stock fenceable instead of the cultivated land The necessity, as well as the propriety of this change, has been time and again discussed by men who have felt its importance. The advantages of such a change may be seen by a short

Saracenic Culture. When we look upon the comparative blank in the page of history caused by the dark ages of Europe, we instinctively ask, where has civilization with all its attendant splendors, found a home. Another page answers us in its revelations of the glory of the Saracens under the Caliphs of Bagdad, Cairo and Spain. Here we have a civilization of a truly Oriental type. It is very much like those beautiful flowers which, alas, lack the fragrance of the more modest violet. It is characterized by a want of strength. This lack of vigor was due to the character of the people. Indeed, civilization is only a reflection of the character of a people. It is in this light that we ought to study this type, differing so much from that to which we are accustomed in the West.

Until the close of their civil wars, the Saracens had confined their learning to the Koran, but now they began to awake from their mental sleep and to awake from their mental sleep and the general reader, have been carefully manifest a drowsy interest in literature avoided in this pamphlet. All is clear, exdevised to lessen them. In addition and science. As they became more versed in these, they were more tolerant

At Bagdad the Augustan age of literature was in the ninth century of the era, during the reign of Almamun, who first called the muses from their classic retreat in the shades of Parnassus, to the luxurious city of peace.

We can readily divide the learning of the Saracens into the four classes of philosophy, mathematics, astronomy and physic. The ancient Greek sages were studied, but only through the imperfect medium of translations. Such was the pride of one Caliph, in the Arabic tongue, that he ordered the originals to be destroyed. This is attested by the fact of our finding in the Arabic version what is lost in the original text. The writings of Aristotle, Plato, Euclid, Appollonius, Ptolemy, Hippocrates and Galen, were familiar to the Saracens, who adopted the philosophy of Plato. The mathematics, being of such nature that they cannot recede, were this place. returned to the Europeans in an im-
