The ability of the human body to resist the causes of disease depends upon its vigor and upon the regularity with which the several organs perform their functions. In the winter the most prolific sources of sickness are damp and cold, and it is therefore wise and prudent to fortify the system against them ov wholesome stimulations. Hence it is that Hostetter's Stomach Bitters prove such an admirable safeguard against the complaints most common at this season. The ngredients of this powerful vegetable invigorant comprise three essential medicinal eleway robbery, was sentenced to two ments which act simultaneously upon the digestion, the circulation, the secretions, and the nerves, infusing strength and regularity into all. In this way the Bitters put the body in the best possible condition to escape an attack of rheumatism, or intermittent fever, or indigestion, or biliousness, or pul-monary disease. Cold and damp are very heat, and a protective medicine is quite as needed in winter as in summer. The commercial stimulants so unwisely taken in the forms of drains to "keep out the cold," have
