The Business Prospect.

The New York Independent, which ought to be an authority in regard to the dry goods trade, insists that the croakers have exaggerated th dullness in the branch business. I

The real truth is that business thus far has been very good, and the prospeets are all flattering of its being much better. The movement of the erops has commenced early, and, a the whole business of the country more especially the dry goods business depends upon the agricultural pro ducts of the West, there is every reason for believing that they are so abundant as to leave no room for doubt as to the business prosperity of the country this year. The regular current of trade has been resumed and the return of the holiday-seeking operators to their accustomed places of business has commenced, and a very marked change has been the resuit. There is nothing to encourage the belief in a sound and large amount of regular business.

A New York firm, Messrs. Dun, Barlow & Co., have been at the pains to collect evidence from their agents in all parts of the country, and give the result in their circular of August 27. They say that the indications for some months have been all in favor of renewed activity in commercial oircles. The indebtedness is small. the stocks light, economy general, and the crops abundant. Monetary facilisystem more settled than ever before for years. They aded:

It may be doubted if ever before in the history of this vast continent there were more millions of dollars' worth in the hands of producers than now. Since the paoie there has been little opportunity for the putting out of money into general circulation. Money. therefore, accumulated at the great centers, and all the winter and spring and summer there has been a plethora of money in New York, Boston, Philadelphia and Baltimore, while in other cities it has been scarce, and in almost all country localities almost impassible to obtain. The consequence has been small remittances from country merchants, equally difficult payments in their turn from jobbers, thus causing a severe strain upon the resources of importers and manufacturers. But if ever relief was promised from any pressure it is now; the abundance that the earth has probe gathered from so many hands, and country, that literal streams of cur- arrives at the effice on that day. rency will be set in motion all over merchandise to its normal condition.
