LOVE IN WINTER. BY ROBERT BUCHANAN.

Poetry.

'Oh, love is like the roses, And every rose shall fall, For sure as Summer closes They perish, one and all. Then love, while leaves are on the trees,

And birds sing in the bowers; When winter comes, too late 'twill be To pluck the happy flowers. It is a maiden singing, An ancient girl, in sooth; The dizzy room is ringing With her shrill song of youth;

The white keys sob as swift she tries Each shrill and shricking scale: "Oh, love is like the roses!" cries This muslined nightingale.

In a dark corner dozing I close my eyes and ears, And call up, while reposing, A glimpse from other years; A genre-picture, quaint and Dutch, I see from this dark seat --Tis full of human brightness, such

As makes remembrance sweet. Flat leagues of endless meadows (In Holland lies the scene), Where many pollard shadows O'er nut-brown ditches lean; Gray clouds above that never break, Mists the pale sunbeams stripe, With groups of steaming cattle, make windmill, and below it A cottage near a road, Where some meck pastoral poet Might make a glad abode; A cottage with a garden, where Prim squares of pansies grow, And, sitting on a garden-chair,

A landscape "after Cuyp."

A dame with locks of snow. In trim black, trussed and bodiced, With petticoat of red, And on her bosom modest A kerchief white bespread. Alas! the breast that heaves below Is shriveled now and thin, Though vestal thoughts as white as snow

Still palpitate within. Her hands are mittened nicely, And folded on her knee: Her lips, that meet precisely Are moving quietly. She listens while the dreamy bells O'er the dark flats intone-

Now come, now gone, in dying swells The Sabbath-sounds are blown Her cheek a withered rose is. Her eyes a violet dim; And hums a happy hymn.

But soft! what wonder makes her start And lift her aged head. While the faint flutterings of her heart Just touch her cheeks with red?

The latch clicks: through the gateway An aged wight steps slow. Then pauses, doffing straightway His broad-brimmed gay chapeau! Swallow-tailed coat of blue so grand, With buttons bright beside. He wears, and in his trembling hand A nosegay, ribbon-tied.

His thin old legs trip lightly In breeches of nankeen, His wrinkled face looks brightly, So rosy, fresh and clean: For old he is and wrinkled plain, With locks of golden gray,

Was never wooed again.

But when the Summer ended

When every vision splendid

Before the summer closes

Againithese twain came face to face

Love comes and love must fice!

Love's sapture and love's glee!"

Oh peace! for in the garden there

Doffs hat, and with a courtly air

While church-bells softly ring,

Beholds the self-same thing:

With ribbons at his knee:

Oh, talk not of love's rapture,

When youthful lovers kiss;

What mortal sight may capture

Beside her now he sits and glows,

Then, spectacles upon his nose,

She sees in him a happy boy-

Swift, agile, amorous-eyed;

Youth, hope, love vivified!

Content there he sits smoking

Gossiping oft and joking,

As a gay lover should,

There gravely juvenescent,

In sober Sabbath-joy,

They sit, a maid and boy!

Thou foolish singer, cease!

"Oh, love is like the roses!"-No!

Love finds his fireside 'mid the snow,

[Gentleman's Magazine,

WINNING A NEW DRESS.

it makes it all the more enjoyable she says," went on Mrs. Vernon. "You know Leith's always telling how easy it is to get the start of a woman in a joke, or anything of that kind. It seems Mrs. Leith got the start of him in some way, and he felt so cheap over it that he promised to get her the prettiest dress in regard to it. That's
