HOW JOHN JOHNSTON AP-PLIES MANURE AND GROWS CORN.

John Johnston, of Geneva, N. Y. (now eighty-seven years old), is acknowledged to be the most successful, common sense, practical farmer in the United States. notice that the Elmira (N. Y.) Husbandman has an account of a late visit to this venerable farmer. The farm, on which he has lived since 1821, was purchased soon after reaching this country from Scotland, and the land at the time was not thought to be valuable, as the crops that grew on it were "But it was fortunate for me," said Mr. Johnston, "that I had learned in the old country the value of manure, and how to apply it. It was fortunate also that I understood the advantage of draining, for I soon found that was the first great want of my farm. sent to Scotland for samples of tiles nd had them made here. My improvements, through draining, soon attracted great attention. drained my farm as rapidly as I could meet the expense, and applied all the manure I could make. I grew splendid crops of wheat and corn. Corn I found was a very profitable crop. The stalks made excellent feed for animals. My wife always thought she could make better butter from cows fed on stalks than from those kept on and grain, and working my large product of straw into manure. The best crop of wheat I ever raised was forty-two and a half bushels per acre on sixty-four acres; but I have several times raised an average of forty bushels. I aimed to have my land kept clean and rich, and always to use pure seed. My rule is to apply manure several months before it is plowed under. I pile my manure in the spring, and in the fall I spread it on such land as I intend to plow for corn the following spring. One great object I have in piling my manure, is to to destroy all weed seeds. If the manure is handled enough, all seeds will be destroyed. I have raised 187 bushels of ears of corn to the acre, (equal to ninety-three and a half bushels shelled corn). This was a little more than an average, although I have had large crops all the time. I plant my corn in drills three feet four inches apart, getting as near as possible five kernels to a foot. I have not planted in hills for thirty years. A good hand will plant seven acres a day with a drill, and the yield of corn will be larger and the stalks vastly better. The last time the corn is plowed, a GARDEN Soil .- It will always pay to make it deep, even if done with a spade; but remember to keep all the surface soil at the top, and not bury it at the bottom, as I have seen done by some gardeners. If the expense of trenching or deepening the soil of the roll up with a pancake slice, and whole garden this year be too serve from a flat dish, very hot, much for the purse, then select and sprinkled with sugar. one portion for this season's improvement and another for next year. Clay soils are especially benefited by trenching, and while such soils are not specially adapt- add a full pound of pulverized ed to early crops, the trenching sugar, the peel of one lemon and will be found a great aid, in the the juice of three, cold; three pints aeration it gives, toward earliness, and for a dry, hot summer, a clay soil trenched is superior to any of cool; a little cinnamon or a few lighter texture. cloves may sometimes be added,

THE VALUE OF HEN MANURE.-If all the droppings from the roosts by hens be carefully saved in barrels, and every spring and fall this manure be composted with any good soil or muck from swamps, and so kept a few months, its value for any crop is equal to Peruvian guano, and it may, I think, be estimated at fifty cents per fowl per annum. From fifty hens I saved about ten barrels of the pure hen guano during the year. What I save from November to April I compost in the spring with soil. First I spread in a circle soil to the depth of three or four inches. Then I spread hen manure about an inch deep; then I spread another layer of soil, and then a layer of manure, till the heap is completed, using about four times the bulk of soil that I do of manure, the last layer being soil. The top of this compost heap I make flat, to catch the rains; then I cover it with any refuse hay or straw, then place some sticks of wood or boards against the covering to keep it in its place, and in two or three months it is ready to use, having become thoroughly incorporated with the soil; but, as the season for planting is then past mostly, I leave

When you see him driving his work instead of his work driving bim, it shows that he will never be driven from good resolutions, and that he will certainly work his way to prosperity.

When you always see in his wood-house a sufficiency for three months or more, it shows that he will be a more than ninety days' hay. I wintered a good deal of wonder in farming operations, and stock, feeding up my stalks, hay that he is not sleeping in his house after a drunken frolic.

BEER.

The Commissioner of Agriculture, in his report for the year 1875, speaks as follows: There can be no doubt of the general adulteration of all malt liquors. In England and other countries, where heavy penalties are imposed, and an increasing vigilance practiced to detect and punish such frauds, by a system of inspection of all malt liquors manufactured before exposed to sale, the practice is very common. How much more in this country, where there are no laws on the subject, and no officer to carefully analyze the products of the brewery? Some years ago, Professor Mapes, of New York, analyzed the beer from a dozen different breweries, and all were found adulterated with noxious substances. It is said that the sale of drugs to brewers is a profitable part of the trade. This is perfectly infamous. Cocculus indicus, (fish-berry,) nux vomica, (dog-button, from which strychnine is obtained,) are some of the delectable substances found in beer! These are potent poisons, and the brewer found using them should be drowned at once in one of his own vats. The British Parliament passed a law to prevent this nefarious business. The following is an extract: 'No druggist, vender of or dealer in drugs, or chemist, or any other person, shall sell or deliver to any licensed rewer, dealer in or retailer of beer, knowing them to be such, or shall sell or deliver to any person on account of, or in trust for, any brewer, dealer or retailer, any liquor called by the name of or sold for coloring, from whatever material the same may be made; or any material or preparation other than unground brown malt, for the darkening the color of worts beer, or any molasses, vitriol, honey, quassia, coccolus indicus, grains of paradise, Guinea pepper, or opium, or any extract or preparation of molasses, or any article or preparation to be used in worts beer for or as a substitute for malt or hops; and if any druggist shall offend in any of these particulars, such preparation, &c., shall be forfeited, and may be seized by any officer of feit five hundred pounds.

excise, and the person so offending shall for-'Under this law, very many druggists and brewers were brought to grief, and yet the practice continues. Unless the American ublic are ready to admit the immaculate purity and innocence of American brewers they must be content, while drinking their beer, to cherish the belief that they are at the same time guzzling some narcotic poison or damaging medicine. In view of the unprecedented growth of the barley crop; of the great increase of the number of malsters and prewers; of the vast unknown quantities of beer that are drunk in every city and almost every town on the continent, it is the dictate of sound wisdom that the attention of legislators should be called to the subject of the adulteration of our malt liquors, and severe JOHN C. They correct diseased action in the several assimilative organs of the body, and are so composed that obstructions within their range can rarely withstand or evade them. While they produce powerful effects, they are, at the same time, the safest and best physic for children.
