NOVEMBER.

Calendar table for November with days of the week and dates.

FARMERS' DAUGHTERS.

The London Pall Mall Gazette says: "England can no longer furnish her own butter. The cheaper kinds come from America, for Americans, even with their rich pastures and improved stock of cows, cannot make the best grade. The high-priced grades come to Southampton from Normandy and Brittany. And why is good butter not made in England? Because the dairymaid with her pail is a thing of poetry and the past. Because farmers' wives and daughters now think dairy work a degradation."

The Gazette proceeds to state the enormous income which dairy farming carried on by women has brought to France; the daughter of a dairy farmer often receiving a dower of twenty thousand dollars on her wedding day. Much of it is the product of her own work skill and management.

We might go on with the inquiry. Why cannot Americans make the best grade of butter? Because the business has gone out of the hands of the farmer's wife and daughter, and is done by machinery. Near Philadelphia, in the rich hill-farms, there are a few old Quaker dames and their daughters who are not ashamed of this old-time craft; whose yellow-fragrant pats of butter, wrapped in cool leaves, and packed in tubs delicately clean, are known all over the country, and command $1 or $1.50 pound in any city market.

"But," says the farmer, "are our daughters, who have received a modern education, to go back to the old drudgery of their grandmothers?" We question whether the modern education has not made them despise too much the old drudgery? In the majority of cases, these daughters are still compelled to work for their living. They crowd into the cities, as poor artists, china decorators, clerks, shop-girls, or they besiege editors with mawkish verses.

In this slighted dairy work is a paying business which belongs to women, could they master it, would yield them as certain an income as it does the Breton or Norman girl. It is a business which requires intelligence, scrupulous cleanliness and delicacy of manipulation.

A roll of clover-scented butter of the best grade is a higher work of art than a bad picture or a trashy verses. Our girls who are looking from their country homes, pining for a career, should dig under their own hearthstone to find if the pot of gold is not waiting for them there.—Youth's Companion.

SOILING STOCK.—A writer, in a recent number of the Milch Zeitung on the danger to German agriculture from foreign competition, says that his own experience of fifty years has taught him that regular soiling of cattle is best for the farmer and for his fields, bringing in greater profit and maintaining the fertility of the land at a higher point—that twice as much fodder can be produced on a given surface when the forage plant is allowed to grow as a cultivated crop and reach a certain degree of maturity, than when, as in pasture, it is continually cropped off and trodden down. He believes, as do all the best German writers on the subject, that the most successful system of agriculture in the long run is that in which a large quantity of stock is kept and fed well, and a careful rotation of crops is followed, in which the same crop is never put twice in succession on the same land. The soiling system makes it easier to carry out the second part of his programme, and the greater variety of crops that can be raised on a long rotation provides a greater variety of fodder for the stock, so that these two features of the best modern agricultural practice work admirably together. The soiling system provides a more uniform ration in respect to quantity, and avoids much loss of manure. It may be pretty safely affirmed that the droppings of cattle in the pasture are more than half wasted by drying in the sun, or by too strong dosing with manure in isolated spots here and there. Where land is cheap and abundant, and cannot be profitably cultivated and carried up to a high degree of fertility, pasturage over a large portion of the farm may be allowable, but when high farming pays, pasture land is a poor investment, and may eat up a large part of the profits from the cultivated fields.

SOILING ORCHARD GRASS.—A Virginia correspondent asks if he may safely sow orchard grass with rye in September. As it survives the winters of New York it can hardly be endangered in Virginia. It resists summer droughts very stubbornly, and is a valuable grass for early pasture or hay, if cut early. As it is fit for cutting when red clover is in blossom, it is profitable to sow both; but as there would be some doubt of the clover passing the winter safely, unless sown very early this month, it would be best to sow it early in the spring. Orchard grass is apt to stool, and should, therefore, be sown thickly and evenly. A bushel and a half of orchard grass seed per acre (fourteen pounds to the bushel) would be a proper quantity, and of clover six quarts per acre.

A correspondent of the Country Gentleman believes that every species of bird, large and small, is subject to the gapes. The young of the robin are often troubled with them. It is also believed that many chicks thus afflicted die of starvation on account of their inability to swallow. The parasite disease is occasioned by a number of small worms in the throat, producing inflammation. The fowl is oftentimes relieved by the use of a stiff horse hair or a quill stripped of its feathers within an inch of the end, which when carefully used, will remove some of the worms. Care and proper attention to fowls will ward off the disease. Pure water, wholesome food and sufficient room for exercise will seldom fail in preventing its appearance.

APPLE CHEESE.—Peel and quarter a quantity of apples, stew them with a little water, a good deal of sugar, the thin rind of a lemon and a few cloves, or a stick of cinnamon. When quite done pass them through a hair sieve; and to one quart of the puree thus obtained add half a packet of gelatine, dissolved in water; mix well, pour into a mold, and when set turn it out and serve with a custard poured about it. It is well to remember that the puree must be thoroughly well sweetened and flavored to carry off the insipidity of the gelatine.

Corn loses one fifth by drying, and wheat one-fourteenth. From this the estimate is made that it is more profitable for farmers to sell unshelled corn in the fall for 75 cents than at $1 a bushel in the following summer, and the wheat $1.25 in December is equal to $1.50 in the succeeding June. In the case of potatoes—taking those that rot and are otherwise lost with the straggles, there is but little doubt that between October and June the loss to the owner who holds them is not less than 33 per cent.

BEEF HASH.—Two tumbler of hot water, a large spoonful of butter, three tablespoonfuls of grated cheese and the same of fine bread crumbs; then season highly with cayenne pepper, adding three tumbler of cold beef, minced. It should all be stirred well together and served as soon as hot.

SCALLOPED TOMATOES.—Cut and peel your tomatoes; first a layer of bread crumbs, then a layer of tomatoes, then pepper, salt, a little sugar and butter, then the bread crumbs; over the last layer of crumbs spread beaten egg, and bake three-quarters of an hour.

BAKED TOMATOES.—Take large tomatoes, cut the tops off and remove the seeds (taking as little of the tomatoes as possible), fill the cavities with bread crumbs, pepper and salt, put in a baking dish, then stew the top with a little pure beef dripping or butter.

A correspondent says he mixes hog's lard in the dough he gives his hens, and asserts that a piece as large as a hickory nut will, if divided up and mixed, with their soft feed, set a hen to laying immediately after she is broken up.
