Poetry.
FIVE.
"But a week is so long!" he said
With a toss of his curly head.
"One, two, three, four, five, six, seven!
Seven whole days! Why, in six, you know
(You said it yourself—you told me so),
The great God in Heaven
Made all the earth and the seas and skies,
The trees and the birds and the butterflies!
How can I wait for my seed to grow?"
"But a month is so long!" he said,
With a droop of his boyish head.
"Hear me count—one, two, three, four—
Four whole weeks, and three days more;
Thirty-one days, and each will creep
As the shadows crawl over yonder steep;
Thirty-one nights and I shall lie
Watching the stars climb up the sky!
How can I wait till a month is o'er?"
"But a year is so long!" he said,
Uplifting his bright young head.
"But there's much to win, there is much to lose;
A man must labor, a man must choose,
And he must be strong to wait!
The crown of honor, must do and dare!
No time has he to toy with fate,
Who would climb to manhood's high estate!"
"Ah! life is not so long!" he said,
Bowing his grand white head,
"One, two, three, four, five, six, seven!
Seven times ten are seventy.
Seventy years! As swift their flight
As swallows cleaving the morning light,
Or golden gleams at even,
Life is short as a summer night—
How long, O God! is eternity?"

Selected Story.
A DURL OR A WEDDING.
I am an ardent admirer of female beauty, and ought to have been an artist or a sculptor, but I am neither. I was a book-keeper for Brown & Co., wholesale dealers in hides and tallow. Henry Bower, a young man of very lively disposition, was employed in the same office. We boarded and rode together.
One night Henry and I attended one of the lyceum lectures in W. We had hardly been in the hall five minutes before my attention was fixed upon one of the ladies in the front seat. She was a little to the right of me, but as she was talking very earnestly to the lady next to her, her face was turned towards us; and susceptible as I am, I could not but be impressed by the beauty of it.
Indeed, I could not withdraw my gaze from the beautiful young lady before me. She had golden hair, and her bluest eyes swam full of love and sweetness. Her nose was small and straight, and she had just the prettiest dimple among the blushes on either cheek. And then such a mouth! What red lips, teeth of pearl flashing between the roses. Her forehead was smooth and broad, and her neck, I saw as the fur cape drooped low on her shoulders, was as white as alabaster and smooth as marble. In brief, I did not hear a word of the lecture.
A month passed without my seeing anything of my beautiful stranger. But about that time I received an invitation to visit my friend, Mrs. Segard, in M. She is a widow of forty, and is the mother of a certain Miss Segard, familiarly called Clara. I knew that Mrs. Segard had tried to bring about a marriage between Clara and myself, and I believe I was not much opposed to the match. Clara was a good girl, everybody said; a very pretty brunette, with flashing black hair and eyes, but her form was short, thick and dowdily. I admire a handsome form quite as much as a handsome face. I might have married her—I really think I should, but for a little affair that happened at U.
The morning I started for M, Bowers accompanied me to the depot. While I was buying my ticket, I noticed another gentleman come into the waiting-room. My first thought was that it was my shadow that I saw before me. He was about my height, had a light complexion like mine, and eyes of grizzly-gray, and one of them turned in just like mine. He had on a tall silk hat, tipped on one side of his sandy locks, and so did I; and furthermore, he carried in his hand a carpet bag, with a tag marked 'J. McD.' tied to the straps. So did I.

I looked at him and he returned the compliment.
"I say, sir," said the stranger, looking down at the carpet bag I held, and examining the tag, "are you John McDougal or am I?"
"My name is McDougal. I hope you are an honest man, for you see, if you should happen to rob a bank, forge a note, pick a pocket or cut somebody's jugular, I might have to suffer, perhaps swing for it. I can give you reference as to my character," I answered.
"Yes, that's very good. But, Mr. McDougal, which way are you going to go?"
"Down. I have just bought my ticket."
"Then I'm going up. I don't think we'd best travel together. There's the train starting now. Good-by, Mr. McDougal. I wish you success, and for my sake don't spoil your character."
To get to M, which by the way, is a rather out-of-the-way place, a small, one horse town, with one tavern, two churches and a poor house, I had to leave the cars at T, and then take a private conveyance to M, five miles distant. I could have gone by the stage, but that leaves U once a day at five o'clock in the morning.
So when the cars stopped at U I took my carpet bag in my hand, and got out upon the platform.
There was quite a large number of people at the station, but I took no notice of any of them except a tall, brawny man, in a brown overcoat and slouched hat, who started for me as soon as I stepped off the cars.
I was about to move away when slouched hat laid his hand heavily on my shoulder.
"You are a villain!"
"Sir!"
"I repeat it. You're villain!"
"A miserable scamp," said a corpulent gentleman, coming forward and scowling fiercely.
"Now, I felt that I was a match for the latter, but as to the other one, I did not doubt but he might work me up into shoestrings in less than three minutes.
"Will you please explain yourselves, gentlemen," I asked, trying to smile.
"Yes, I will," answered the big one, putting great stress on the "will."
"Certainly," growled the corpulent gentleman with a smile.
"Come this way, you rascal," said the tall one, drawing me along with him.
His companion followed us out back of the station, where we were out of sight and hearing of the rest of U.
"Now," said the tall gentleman, turning and confronting me, "I'll introduce myself. I am Captain Augustus Boynton. This gentleman is my father, John Boynton. Do you know us now?"
"Well, really," I replied, wondering in my own mind what the deuce was coming, "really I don't know anything more about you than what you've just told."
"Hush!" said the captain, and he bent down and hissed in my ear: "I am Carrie Boynton's brother."
"And I am her father," growled John Boynton.
"Ah, really, do you say so?" I could not help smiling, the whole affair seemed so ludicrous. "Give my regards to Carrie."
"Ha! you laugh at us, do you, villain?" cried the captain. "Look here," said he lowering his voice to a hoarse whisper; "look at these."
I did look, for just then he drew from the pocket of his brown overcoat a handsome case, and opening it, displayed a pair of splendid silver-mounted duelling pistols.
"Take your choice."
A cold tremor ran through my frame. Was I to be murdered?
"Choose quick," urged the captain.
"Sir," said I, in a tremulous voice, while the cold drops of perspiration stood out on my brow, "there must be some mistake. I'm book-keeper for Brown & Co., dealers in hides and tallow. My father was Norton McDougal, my mother was Mary McDougal, my grandfather was—"

FOR THE HERALD. SCIENTIFIC MISCELLANY.
Late investigations of German scientists have shown that the electric light is not only healthier than other methods of illumination in leaving the air purer, but that it increases the power of vision in some respects especially in distinguishing colors. Red, blue, green and yellow are much more distinct under this light than by daylight.
Two Lapsie chemists have devised a process for obtaining sugar in a permanently liquid form. This result is said to be effected by adding to a purified sugar solution a small quantity of citric acid, which combines with the sugar and deprives it of its tendency to crystallize.
Some experiments by M. Gautier appear to prove that human saliva possesses, in a wider degree, the same poisonous property as that of serpents. The human saliva injected under the skin of a bird caused death, with symptoms very closely resembling those resulting from serpent bites.
A new theory of the so-called fascination of birds by snakes is that the bird mistakes the snake's tongue, which the reptile keeps in rapid and constant motion, for a lively worm, and watches it intently with the anticipation of devouring it.
M. Pasteur has resolved to extend his studies in vaccination to yellow fever, with a view of determining whether or not the disease is due to parasites and can be guarded against by inoculation. A broad field of investigation is open to Pasteur, as it is suggested by his discoveries thus far that all contagious maladies may be due to parasitic growths the virulence of which may be so reduced by his method of inoculation as to render this class of diseases no longer a matter of dread.
A Neapolitan gardener, after years of experiment, has produced a camellia with a delicate perfume, and he thinks it probable that these flowers may in the near future be so cultivated as to rival the rose in the fragrance of its odor.
Mr. C. Shaler Smith has given the results of extensive observations in relation to the pressure exerted by the wind. The most violent gale recorded by him was at East St. Louis, in 1871, when the wind overtook a locomotive, the force developed in so doing being no less than 93 pounds per square foot. At St. Charles a gale was recorded in 1877, the pressure required being 84 pounds per square foot. At Marshfield, in 1880, a brick mansion was leveled, the force necessary being 58 pounds per square foot. Below these extraordinary pressures, Mr. Smith instances numerous cases of trains blown off rails, and bridges, etc., blown down by gales of 24 to 31 pounds per square foot. In all the examples the lowest force required to do the observed damage has been taken as the maximum power of the wind, although, of course, it may have been higher.
Enthusiasts who make a special study of sun-spots and attendant phenomena believe that the corner-stone of a new science is being laid by discoveries pointing to an intimate connection between solar and terrestrial meteorology. Just what the connection is they are not yet able to clearly define, although electricity is suspected of being the agent through which the effects are manifested upon our planet. It is known that the gaseous envelope of the sun is affected by eruptions of such prodigious magnitude as to be utterly beyond our power of conception, these disturbances appearing to us in the form of rapidly changing spots and protuberances. The eruptions of the spots—or sun-storms—occur at remarkably regular intervals, a complete cycle of the various stages of activity from maximum to minimum and again to maximum being performed in about eleven years—the so-called "sun-spot period." The sun-spot physicists claim a coincidence of the periods of maximum spots and years of great atmospheric and physical disturbance in the earth. The present has been a year of great solar disturbances, while it has been marked upon our globe. Further than this, by violent storms and earthquakes these

Very few persons have any idea of the slowness the Austin street car is capable of. Only yesterday a lady with a two-year-old boy got in the car. She paid her own fare and asked what was the charge for the infant. "No charge, madam. We only charge adults." "Then I might as well pay; he will be grown up before he gets there. I'm going five blocks."

It was Saturday night in Leadville. Six rough miners were playing poker. But as the clock struck the hour of twelve, proclaiming that the Lord's day had come, with one accord they threw down the cards and left the saloon. They went across the street to see a dog fight.

In addition to these rates, those previously arranged for special parties of 20, 30, 50 and 80 are still in force, and may be availed of under the conditions named in Circular of November 1st, 1881.
An office for the identification of purchasers and stamping of return-coupons has been established at the Union Depot in Atlanta. It will be open 30 minutes prior to the departure of the trains.
None of the conditions of these Tickets will be changed in any respect.
Investigation of the appliances for personal comfort, lodging, and food, means of transit between Atlanta and the Exposition Grounds, authorizes the assurance that all elements exist contributing to a pleasant and economical visit.
For full information not contained in this Circular, apply to the undersigned, or to Station Agents of the Railway at interest.
A. POPE, Gen. Passenger Agent.
