The Lecture of Mr. B. J. Ramage, Jr., Before the South Carolina Historical Society.

The lecture of Mr. B. J. Ramage, Jr., at the South Carolina Hall last evening was delivered before a cultivated audience, and was attentively heard and highly appreciated. Mr. Ramage, who is a native South Carolinian, has been devoting himself during the past two years to the study of institutional history under the auspices of the Historical Semi-nary of the Johns Hopkins University of Baltimore, and his lecture last evening, which was delivered upon the invitation of the South Carolina Historical Society, treats of "Local self-government in South Carolina, the parish, the district and the county." The lecturer, at the expense of much time and research, has compiled a valuable paper which gives a remarkably clear view of the birth and growth of the parish system in the Province of South Caorlina, together with the causes leading to its formation and the laws governing it. In like manner the subsequent formation and government of the district system in middle and upper Carolina is explained. The jealousies and conflicts between the parishes and the districts are recited, and then as the tide of immigration from other States peopled upper South Carolina more thickly and the wants of the people demanded local courts and local self government it is shown that the these conficts resulted in
