The Wadlington Will Case-

A short time after Maj. Thos. B. Wadlington's death last winter, letters of administration were granted to his nephews, Joseph L. Keitt and Thos. W. Keitt, who at once took charge of lington's reputed daughter, and asking that he, as one of the executors, be ground that the deceased left no will. Mr. Bauskett was named as executor and a blank was left for the name of a second executor. The will as drawn was sent to Maj. Wadlington. The rough draft of directions was introduced in evidence.

In 1873, R. V. Gist and R. C. Sondley witnessed a will for Maj. Wadlington, and they swear that Capt. Jno. .. Sondley was the third witness. Capt. John Sondley swears that he knows nothing about it, and is positive that he never witnessed a will for Maj. Wad-lington or anybody else. In the spring of 1882 Maj. Wadlington placed a regularly executed will in the hands of Mr. Silas Johnstone, and asked him to draw a new one, making some changes. Mr. Johnstone remembers that the will was witnessed by R. V. Gist and some Sondley, but he feels sure that he would have roticed if Capt. Jno. R. Sondley's name had appeared as a witness, that gentleman being named as one of the executors. The will must have been that drawn by Mr. Monteith. In the new will Mr. Johnstone was directed to provide for Betty Reed, but the rest of the estate was to be given to Thomas W. Keitt and Miss Hattie Keitt, instead of Mr. Bauskett. On the 31st of August, 1882, Mr. Johnstone sent both wills to Maj. Wadlington who was sick and directed them to be put into his desk. About two months afterwards he was rendered helpless by a fall and did not leave his bed until his death. On the second day after his death, a search was made by Col. Ellison Keitt, assisted by his sons and daughter, but nothing in the shape of a will was found, except the draft drawn by Mr. Johnstone; that had never been signed. Much evidence was introduced to show Maj. Wadlington's feelings towards the Kents and Mr. Bauskett, but his unchanged purpose appears to have been to provide liberally for Betty Reed. A great deal was said about his declarations as to the disposition of his property, but much of the evidence was conflicting. The case seems to resolve itself into two questions: 1. Was the will which is attempted to be proved ever executed? 2. If so, was it revoked by Maj. Wadlington? The argument was begun at 11 o'clock and ended at 8 o'clock on Saturday. It was exhaustive on both sides. The Probate Judge will not reach a decision for several days; this is about the hardest nut he ever had to crack. In about five years we hope to be able to give the final decision of the Supreme Court in this case. The case has excited unusual interest in our community, both on account of the novelty of some of its features, and the amount of the property involved.
