Wilkinson went there for the purpose of becoming married to Miss Rosa Eska.

THE DEATH OF GEN. POLK.

An Interesting Account of the Sad Event from a Northern Newspaper.

The death of Gen. Leonidas K. Polk was one of the saddest tragedies of the war. There have been many versions of how the death of the noted bishop and general occurred, but the following from The New York Times of 1864 is the true story of the killing of Gen. Polk, which occured on Kennesaw mountain, the body being brought to Atlanta:

"It seems that Gens. Joe Johntson, Polk and Hardee, accompaied by Gen. Jackson of the cavalry, and an escort of staff officers had ridden out in front of Bates' line to examine a position, thought to be suitable for the Washington artillery. The horses were made fast at the foot of the hill, and the party ascended to the crown. Here they were the initials to an abattis, with several embrasures, rendering the place very much exposed. Our own guns were less than 800 yards in front. There had been little desultory firing during One of them, more courageous than the early hours of the day, but this had ceased some time before the group of officers began their reconnoissance. This was prolonged to a much greater extent than usual, and There the deep tones of the organ steal glided into a general and animated conversation, all of the officers being gathered into a knot and using their hands and glasses with a freedom bespeaking rank and interest. The gunners upon our side could not fail to see them plainly, and while they were being observed, deliberately returned the observation, with full time for calculation and adjustment. The party seemed to forget their exposed situation, although some of the on the little tier of breastworks, our shots. Presently a spherical case

It was then proposed to divide, and the different officers separated to such courses as were at hand. Gen. Charleston, S. C., March 1.—The telegram sent by Lientenant Governor Tillman to President Roosevelt withdrawing the invitation recently forwarded the President to present a sword to Major Micah Jonkins on the occasion of his visit to the Charteston Exposition, has called forth the most bitter denunciation in this city. To day it was stated by a close personal friend of Lieutenant Governor Tillman in this city that Senator Tillman had directed that the invitation be withdrawn.

THE TILLMAN INSULT.

Tillman had directed that the invitation be withdrawn.

In an ungnarded moment the Lieutenant Gover or is said to have divulged the fact that Senator Tillman felt the sting when his invitation to dine at the White House was withdrawn and in a spirit of retaliation he conferred with his nephew, the result of their conference appearing in the dispatch sent to President Roosevelt yesterday.

While Lieutenant Governor Tillman acted without consultation with other members of the committee who had raised funds for the Jenkins sword, the fact that he signed his dispatch as Lieutenant Governor has left a reproach upon the State at large, and because of this denunciation is all the more severe. The sword presentation was only a minor detail of the President's visit to Charleston, and committees will be sent to Washington to assure the Chief Executive that the work of the Tillmans was arbitrary and in violation of the sentiment and feeling throughout the State.

Roosevelt Not Disturbed.

Washington, March, 1 — If the nephew of Senator Tillman, who is acting in the dual capacity of Lieute ant Governor of South Carolina and chairman of a popular subscription committee, expected by means of an insulting telegram to disturb the peace of mind of Theodore Roosevelt, he will be disappointed.

The telegram of James H. Tillman was received at the White House and was laid before the President. It told him first that the committee thanked him for accepting the invitation to present a sword to Major Jenkins of the Rough Riders. In the second place it told him that some of the subscribers to the sword fund wished to have the President withdraw his acceptance. Saturday, March 1st, by Governor M. P. President Roosevelt received many other telegrams from Charleston during yesterday, and if he had been disposed yesterday, and i' he had been disposed to lose sleep on account of the Tillman communications his mind would certainly have been soothed by these messages. Every one of them was a warm expression of loyalty from prominent citizens or organizations and a round demonstration. nuniciation, not only of Lieutenaut Gov-ernor Tillman, but of his uncle. They assured the President that they deplored the whole Tillman business, no less of the uncle than that of the nephew.

Governor McSweeney sent the following telegram to President Roosevelt in connection with Col. Tillman's telegram: "Columbia, February 28.—Theodore Roosevelt, President, Washington, D. C.: t was my intention not to have anything ing the request for you to present the sword to Major Jenkins, but as undue importance and publicity have been attached to it, I beg to say that the telegram sent you was not authorized by the State, and the Lieutenant Governor did not speak afficiently for the State or the not speak officially for the State or the people in his action. His telegram to you was purely a personal matter, and neither the State nor the people should be held responsible in any way for his attitude. M. B. McSweeney, Governor."
